Summit trying for nuclear fuel accord

LONDON (AP) -- President Carter said Saturday night the United States and six other industrial nations meeting at a summit here will try to achieve a "comprehensive international agreement" on the use of fuels for nuclear power production.

The leaders of the top non-Communist industrial nations pledged a coordinated fight against inflation, unemployment and trade barriers in the first round earlier Saturday of the two-day summit.

However, the leaders did not agree on nuclear energy policy during six hours of talks at No. 10 Downing St., official home of Britain's prime minister.

Carter told reporters he and the other leaders agreed to appoint a panel of technicians "to try to study all of the facets of the problem," which has become the key issue at the summit which continues Sunday.

"There is such a diversity of interest and a deep concern about the future that we thought it was time to address this problem," Carter told reporters after returning from an evening at Buckingham Palace.

Carter and the other summit leaders dined with Queen Elizabeth II and members of the British royal family at a blacktie state dinner.

Carter said the "basic question" is how to guarantee adequate supplies of nuclear fuel for electrical production while guarding against misuse of the spent fuel to make nuclear explosives.

He said the summit leaders unanimously agreed that "unless we do take action, there will be a lot of other of the socalled threshold nations who will produce explosives in the future as India did a few years ago. And all of us want to prevent that."

India became the sixth nation with nuclear capability, exploding a nuclear device on May 18, 1974.

Carter did not give any timetable for reaching an international agreement on nuclear non-proliferation.

Sources in the West German delegation said the study panel is to report back within eight weeks on its recommendationos curbing the potential spread of nuclear weapons.

"I thought it went well," Carter told reporters after an afternoon meeting. "We got started on energy and we will finish up on that tomorrow."

But he added, "How to resolve this (nuclear) problem with so many different kinds of nations' needs is one that will probably be our most difficult undertaking."

Asked if Carter had yielded on the nuclear issue, U.S. Treasury Secretary W. Michael Blumenthal told reporters, "he has certainly not given up on any position that I am aware of."

On general economic issues, leaders and their aides said the meeting produced none of the acrimony that had been feared on such issues as the rate of economic expansion and trade barriers to protect domestic industries. They pledged to coordinate the fight against infation, unemployment and trade barriers.

Carter said the three-hour opening session of the two-day summit had been "great, excellent, very good."

Carter urges S.S. tax hikes

Second crash at scene of auto fatality

The Friday accident at 8 p.m. killed an 8-month-old Corona boy and seriously injured his young sister at the same intersection.

Highway patrolmen reported that Saturday's collision involved a semi-truck and trailer, van and a car. Officers reported one of the vehicles may have run a stop sign at the corner.

The semi-truck and trailer had been headed east on Schaefer and the van was headed west, also on Schaefer. The car apparently was headed south on Euclid.

Injured in the van were a 17-year-old mother, Carolyn DeJager and her 5-month-old daughter, Rachel, both of whom were thrown through the windshield of the van.

A CHAT WITH THE QUEEN

Asks employers to pay a larger share

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Carter administration, seeking to bolster the financially troubled Social Security system, will urge higher Social Security taxes and an unprecedented use of general tax funds, administration sources said Saturday.

Sources said the administration will recommend major changes in the Social Security taxing system, including:

—Making employers pay taxes on the full amount of each worker's wages rather than only on an initial portion.

—By the mid-1980s, raising the level of that initial portion on which workers pay Social Security taxes beyond the automatic increases already scheduled.

—Diverting general income tax revenues to pay Social Security benefits when the national unemployment rate exceeds 6 per cent.

—Accelerating scheduled automatic increases in the Social Security tax rate.

The Carter administration is expected to give its views Monday on how to bail out the Social Security trust funds that otherwise will go broke about the time Carter's term expires.

Administration sources said the transfer of general revenue funds to the Social Security system would only come into play when unemployment is over 6 per cent. Such a transfer was said to represent Social Security taxes lost due to high joblessness.

For example, when the jobless rate is 7 per cent as it is currently, the transfer of money would involve the difference between the amount of FICA taxes that would have been generated if unemployment was 6 per cent and the actual revenues produced when joblessness is 7 per cent.

The total Social Security payroll tax rate is currently 11.7 per cent — half of it, 5.85 per cent, paid by the worker, and the other half by his or her employer.

The amount of a worker's annual earnings subject to this payroll tax reached $16,500 this year under an automatic adjustment mechanism in the law.

Thus, for a worker at the upper limit of this $16,500 socalled wage base, it means a Social Security tax payment of $965.25 by the worker while the boss pays a matching $965.25.

Sources said the administration will propose that Congress make employers pay Social Security taxes on the full amount of each worker's wages, rather than just the first $16,500, with the existing ceiling being removed in stages over a three-year period.

While the wage-base level automatically is set to rise in the coming years, reaching an expected $17,700 in 1978 when the rate is due to go to 12.1 per cent, the sources said the administration will call for four more base hikes of $600 each for a total $2,400 boost by 1985 atop already scheduled annual increases.

The sources said the administration also will recommend other changes involving the rates, including bringing a further future scheduled increase into effect sooner and diverting part of the money raised by next year's rate hike from Medicare to the retirement and disability program.

Two Montclair children were reported in fair condition Saturday evening in Montclair Doctors Hospital after suffering smoke inhalation during a 2 a.m. fire at their home in an apartment at 4604 Bandera Ave.

Troy Duke, 9, and Dornique Willis, 13, were found in the bedroom and bathroom of their apartment after Montclair firefighters extinguished the flames Saturday morning. The children were rushed to the hospital where they were first pronounced in critical condition. A third child, Deon Duke, 6, was treated and released at the hospital, also for smoke inhalation.

Fire officials said they were summoned by a neighbor who smelled smoke and kicked in the door of the apartment to rescue a 44-year-old male babysitter. The neighbor, however, was unable to reach the children.

Weather

National Weather Service forecast 50 per cent chance of rain today, diminishing to 30 per cent by tonight. Mostly cloudy on Monday, with somewhat lower temperatures. Highs today and Monday in the low 60s. Overnight lows near 50. Monday sunrise 5:54 a.m., sunset 7:41 p.m.

Evening of pomp dictated by circumstance

LONDON (AP) — Jimmy Carter, the no-frills President, ate chicken mousse off a gold plate with the Queen of England on Saturday night.

The menu was French, the conversation English, and the surroundings were the trappings of an empire as Carter and six other heads of state donned black ties for a state banquet with Queen Elizabeth II at Buckingham Palace.

A portrait of King George III, the queen's ancestor who lost the American colonies, gazed down on the 42 diners gathered around a Spanish mahogany table. They are in London for an economic summit conference of non-Communist industrial powers.

The fragrance of fresh spring flowers filled the air. Gilt mirrors trapped the flickering reflection of dozens of candles and the twinkling of the ladies' jewels.

Also attending was Roy Jenkins, president of the European Commission — the Common Market's executive body.

None of the wives of the foreign leaders accompanied their husbands to London, but Prime Minister James Callaghan's wife was at the banquet.

The queen's preference for elegantly served but simple food was apparent in the three courses placed before diners by liveried footmen.

First came filet de saumon St. Germain, a salmon dish served on gold plates made 14 years before the American Revolution. The main course was mousse de volaille a la creme, a chicken concoction rated several stars above that generally associated with civic club luncheons. It was followed by green beans, buttered carrots, new potatoes and a fresh green garden salad.

The entree was served on ornate gold plates brought up by special elevator for the occasion from a World War II bomb shelter in the basement.

$5 million cash in drawers, trash cans

Wealthy recluse found shot to death

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — A wealthy recluse was found shot to death Saturday in her home here where police discovered more than $5 million in cash stuffed in trash cans, drawers and tool boxes.

Police said the home had been set afire. The blaze had been set in two places, and police said they found evidence that gasoline was used to ignite the fire.

Marjorie V. Jackson, clad in flannel pajamas and a housecoat, was found dead on the kitchen floor. She had been shot once at close range with a .22-caliber pistol, Deputy Coroner Charles Green said.

Money found in the house totaled $5,015,480, according to the Marion County sheriff's department.

Mrs. Jackson was the widow of Chester Jackson, son of the founder of the former Standard Grocery chain. Jackson died in 1970, leaving an estate estimated at $14 million.

Green said he thought the 66-year-old woman had been dead for two to four days, although fire investigators said it was unlikely the fire had been smoldering for that long.

An estimated $2 million cash was found in a garbage can in Mrs. Jackson's bedroom, detectives said, and sizeable sums were found concealed elsewhere in the home, including some in a vacuum cleaner bag. Most of the money was in $100 bills.

Investigators were also puzzled over what they described as a "very big spread" of food on a table. They said it appeared as if guests were expected, although Mrs. Jackson was rarely known to entertain.

Going to have to wait for recipes

Actress Liv Ullman really does have a couple of favorite recipes. Except that you won't find them in today's Family Weekly.

Editors of the Progress Bulletin's Sunday supplement said they omitted Miss Ullman's article by mistake, even though the cover page announces her recipes can be found on the inside pages. The nationally distributed supplement is printed in New York.

The PB will run the article in Wednesday's food section.

Death knell sounds for AMC as car maker?

DETROIT (AP) — American Motors Corp. is losing its struggle to stay in the car-making business with the Big Three.

The consensus among some two dozen industry insiders and analysts interviewed by The Associated Press is that AMC is likely to abandon the American car market before the decade is out.

That doesn't mean it will close its doors. Rather, AMC is expected to lop off its car operations so non-automotive activities — which now account for more than half the business — can flourish.

The reason behind AMC's declining car sales is put simply:

AMC was able to hang in the market as a small-car specialist while the other U.S. makers were building big cars. But the energy crisis and federal fuel economy laws have made the Big Three small-car specialists, too. And, with superior financial resources, General Motors, Ford and Chrysler can outdo AMC with newer, more innovative and more fuel-efficient models.

Most of those interviewed believe President Carter's plan to tax gas-guzzlers and give rebates on fuel-stingy models will hasten the demise of AMC as a car producer because it will accelerate the Big Three's development of new generations of small cars.

The possibility of government aid for AMC to keep the car industry competitive has diminished since new competition has come with Volkswagen setting up a U.S. assembly operation and the likelihood that several Japanese makers soon may do the same.

AMC Chairman Roy D. Chapin Jr. adamantly disputes suggestions his firm will drop out of the car market.

"We're been through this so many times before," Chapin said in an interview Friday. "Who knows what's really going to happen?

"We're suffering, but we've pulled through before. We see greater opportunities in the '80s than ever before in our history. We just have to be smart enough to make it happen."

But the numbers are disconcerting:

—U.S. car sales are off for a third consecutive year, to 64,000 through April — less than half what they were in 1974.

—AMC's market share is under 1.8 per cent, the smallest since the company was formed more than two decades ago.

—Four imports are outselling AMC. Toyota has the largest share of the market through April, 4.2 per cent. The others are Datsun, Volkswagen and Honda.

—AMC built more Jeeps, buses and trucks — 56,600 — through April than it did cars, which are off 36 per cent from 1976 to 54,750.

—After losing $74 million in 1975 and 1976, AMC earned $3.7 million in the first half of fiscal 1977, thanks to profitable nonauto operations and the sale of a stamping plant to VW. By contrast, Big Three earnings in just the first three months of 1977 were $903 million by GM, $483 million by Ford, $75 million by Chrysler.

"I think we'll be out of the car business in a year," said one middle-level AMC executive. "Our sales are lousy."

An official at another maker added: "These guys must be at the ragged edge. Something dramatic would have to happen for them to hang in for another year, but I don't know what."

FIESTA DE LOS BARRIOS IN ONTARIO

Flanked by the festival theme, "Unidos Venceremos" (United We Shall Overcome) the queen and her court in Saturday's Cinco de Mayo parade ride down Euclid Avenue in Ontario. Meanwhile, at right the day's festivities were enjoyed by pretty Anjanette-Marie Juarez, 2, who added her own bouquet to the color of the celebration.

Carter renegs — McGovern

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. George McGovern accused President Carter on Saturday of abandoning campaign promises and party principle out of fear of big business and a preoccupation with imagery.

In a harsh attack on the new administration, McGovern said, "It sometimes seems difficult to remember who won last fall."

Speaking at the convention of the liberal Americans for Democratic Action, McGovern called on the party "to continue the struggle for the principles the Democratic party stood for" in the election.

"The effort may be lonely for awhile," he said.

The speech was filled with pointed references to Carter's public relations efforts during the first three months of his term, and McGovern repeatedly accused Carter of neglecting action on his own campaign issues and the party platform.

"A strange silence has descended on our political life," said McGovern, the party's 1972 presidential nominee. "We all seem mesmerized by image, taken by symbol. We seem to count the ratings of polls far more than the content of policy."

McGovern attacked Carter's programs on economic recovery, energy, defense, welfare reform and health, saying all were being sacrificed or modified to suit special interests at the expense of the needy.

McGovern, in his speech to the ADA, said: "We want to be able to applaud the President's record as strongly as we approved the platform on which he ran. But we will not be a cheering section for tinkling symbols that may signify nothing. We will not agree to substitute cold technocracy for compassionate values."

First-strike risk of nuclear war—Warnke

WASHINGTON (AP) — Disarmament negotiator Paul Warnke says new developments in strategic weapons could increase dangers of nuclear war and may tempt one of the two superpowers to launch an unanswerable first strike against the other.

That would be "because of the fear you won't be able to strike second," Warnke declared before departing this week for Geneva to meet with his Soviet counterpart, Vladimir Semyonov.

Warnke, in an interview, professed himself "guardedly hopeful" that U.S. and Soviet negotiators will make progress toward a new agreement in the Strategic Arms Limitation Talks — SALT — by early October when a 1972 accord expires.

He and Semyonov will start discussing what he called several "secondary issues" this Wednesday in preparation for a later meeting "on the core issues" between Secretary of State Cyrus R. Vance and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko.

Warnke, director of the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency, was asked if he feels Moscow shares Washington's view that there must be progress toward a SALT accord if the spread of nuclear weapons is to be stopped or slowed.

He replied:

"I believe that the Soviet leadership does recognize that a strategic arms agreement would be in their own national self-interest. There are a variety of reasons.

"The arms race is costly. More important, I think they've recognized further technological development could increase the risk at a time of high international crisis.

"Take just one example. Both sides have the potential of improving the accuracy and yield of their weapons. Now that would mean there would be some chance that the landbased intercontinental ballistic missiles (ICBMs with ranges up to 4,000 miles) of one side could be substantially destroyed by a first strike by the other side.

"Now as your ICBMs become both more dangerous and more vulnerable, there is a lowering of the nuclear threshold — and there is the temptation to strike first because you fear you won't be able to strike second.

"So that's the kind of development that they must recognize — as we do — as increasing the risk of nuclear war."

Warnke's concept — that a first-strike nuclear attack by one or other superpower might be unanswerable — cuts across an assumption held by strategists of both sides for years.

That assumption was that there is a certain stability in the balance of terror achieved by the United States and Russia. Both countries were held to understand that neither could launch a first strike without sustaining immediate and awful reprisals. This theory came to be called "mutually assured destruction" — or, appropriately, MAD for short.

He listed some of the problems he and Semyonov would discuss:

—How to count the number of missiles with more than one warhead.

—What sort of agreement can be made for the exchange of data between the two sides.

Youths sought for firing shots

Police today are seeking a group of youths who fired seven shots from their car at another auto at the corner of Bonita Avenue and Sumner Street in Pomona late Friday night.

Officers indicated one male Latin riding in a black Chrysler fired a handgun four times at a passing car containing three young persons. None was injured.

The suspects allegedly chased the victims from Bonita and Sumner, and pulled up next to them at Garey and La Verne avenues. They then fired three more shots at the car, police said.

MASTER PLANT BREEDER

He loves trees and things that grow

Latter day Burbank: plant breeder plans hybrids

By JOE WING
For The Associated Press

Indeed, he has spent much of his 84 years tinkering with nature, evoking new varieties from the slow-working genetics that begin in the spring.

As a result, his patented hybrids dominate the $30 million American nectarine industry and produce fruit all over the world. He also has developed genetically dwarfed peach trees and is hard at work on new varieties of pecans and apricots.

He pauses by one of his dwarf peach trees and lays his gnarled fingers on a blossoming bough. He smiles at his ponytailed assistant, a 23-year-old granddaughter.

"To emasculate a blossom, Robin," he tells her, "you cut it with your fingernail, like this, then strip away the petals and the pollen-bearing stamens without damaging the pistil."

He was demonstrating the first step in a hybridization process that might culminate six years later in still another tree variety to add to the 113 he already has patented.

Robin tried her hand and found the procedure not all that easy. Next day she started practicing the craft under the direction of one of the dozen skilled men and women whose work is vital to Anderson's 40-acre experimental farm near here.

"She catches on quickly," says Anderson. He is most pleased by the aptitude she has shown for selecting promising seedlings and scions. That is the very heart of plant breeding.

Called by one expert the "Luther Burbank of today," Anderson is full of projects and gives no thought to retirement. When he made one concession to age last year and quit driving, Robin gave up a job in Colorado and became his driver and disciple. If things work out well, she might be the one to carry on his "art, science or business," as Burbank himself describes it.

Anderson downgrades his talents. "I'm wrong as often as I'm right," he says. "The nurserymen are the ones who really make the selections. They come around and say 'I can sell that one.' Even when I tell them the tree's faults, they are likely to want it anyway. So I patent it and sell them the rights. They do the grafting and growing themselves.

"Only 25 per cent of my trees have made money for me and the nurserymen." Nevertheless, he collected a record $250,000 in royalties last year. A large portion of the gross is plowed back into his experiment station.

The third child among six born to rugged pioneers on a family farm near Eureka, Calif., about 200 miles north of Santa Rosa, where Burbank achieved fame, Anderson knew hardship but had time to pore over newspapers and magazines at home. His idol was Burbank, then bursting into fame. In recent years, on trips back to his home, he has stopped frequently at Burbank's grave.

Anderson attended a teacher's college, taught for several years, studied horticulture at the University of California in Berkeley, served during World War I and became foreman of a big nursery at Fresno, Calif. When the nursery went broke in the depression, he took his $300 veteran's bonus and started growing nectarines on some of the land he still owns.

He did not grow fruit for himself until he was about 40 years old, nor take out his first fruit patent until he was 42, nor really get going on patents until he was 50.

Anderson took to fruit breeding when he discovered early on that none of the nectarines then available would stand up during shipment to East Coast markets.

How well he has succeeded is shown by the fact that his patented trees have produced as much as 90 per cent of the American crop.

What next?

Self-fertile almonds, for one thing. At present, orchardists must plant more than one variety of almond and depend on bees to fertilize the blossoms.

Another project is to produce a sweet kernel apricot, like some grown in Kashmir that have kernels that may be eaten like nuts. Anderson has patented one under the name of Sweetheart. But to make it really successful, he says, he must make the flesh of the fruit more attractive and easier to ship.

He is trying to come up with a strain of pecan that will produce as many pounds of edible kernels per acre as do almonds and walnuts in the central valley of California.

And then there is always the challenge of improving fruit and nut varieties now considered satisfactory and of developing strains that come into bearing at given times.

There's no danger Anderson will run out of ways of improving on nature's largesse.

Suppression theory draws little support

By BRIAN SULLIVAN
AP Science Writer

KANSAS CITY (AP) — Is Laetrile a valid cancer treatment being suppressed by a conspiracy of the medical establishment?

Or is it simply a product of those who traffic in false hope?

The evidence put forth by scientists testifying for the U.S. Food and Drug Administration at two days of an intense and emotional public hearing in Kansas City, Mo., last week, was heavily on the side of those who say that Laetrile represents false hope.

"Neither the U.S. Food and Drug Administration, the Canadian Food and Drug Directorate, the National Cancer Institute, the American Cancer Society, nor any reputable organization has found any evidence to substantiate the use of Laetrile in the treatment or prevention of cancer," the FDA said in its formal argument.

"Congress has passed no law against apricot pits," argued Michael L. Culbert, of Oakland, Calif., a spokesman for the Committee for Freedom of Choice in Cancer Therapy. (Apricot pits are one source of Laetrile.)

The Laetrile side also contended that recent actions in Florida, Indiana and Alaska involving approval of Laetrile legislation showed that claims for the substance were gaining wider acceptance.

Laetrile is the chemical amygdalin, which occurs naturally in the pits of apricots and peaches and in bitter almonds, It is banned from interstate commerce by the FDA. The agency also has banned the import of the substance, but some individuals have been allowed to bring it into the country under court orders, including one which led to the Kansas City hearing.

In recent years, Laetrile proponents have made much of a study conducted at Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center by Dr. Kanematsu Suguira which seemed to show that Laetrile reduced the spread of breast tumors in mice. But now scientists have reported that no one has ever been able to reproduce those results.

"It is expected that a soon-tobe-released final report on approximately 32 animal studies carried out at Sloan-Kettering will confirm the fact that Laetrile produces no antitumor activity," said Dr. William R. Barclay, editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association.

"This latest series of experiments will add to the already large body of evidence which indicates that Laetrile is not effective in the prevention or treatment of cancer," Barclay testified.

Another point made by Laetrile supporters is that an individual should have a right to "freedom of choice" in medical treatment and that if there is no evidence that it does any good, it still can't do any harm.

"And here is the great tragedy of Laetrile," said Dr. W. Sherwood Lawrence, executive secretary to the California State Cancer Advisory Council. "By the time it is apparent that it doesn't really work, most (cancer patients) will no longer be curable, and some no longer capable of effective long-term control.

"Too often the inherent variations in the progress of the disease are seized on as signs of regression until much too late. There then results preventable and unnecessary loss of life for the cureable."

Laetrile supporters also argue that the substance is a vitamin, B17, and that cancer is a deficiency disease. Dr. Thomas H. Jukes, medical physicist at the University of California at Berkeley, disputed the point.

"Experiments with laboratory animals on purified diets show no indication whatever of a nutritional need for amygdalin (Laetrile)," Jukes said. "These substances have none of the characteristics of a vitamin."

Another key argument in favor of Laetrile is that there could be no harm in allowing terminally ill people to have a seemingly harmless, though worthless, substance if it makes them feel better psychologically.

"But," says the FDA, "the line between the terminally ill and the patient who may benefit from effective therapy, or from new approaches to treatment that have genuine promise, cannot be so finely drawn as to reliably separate the terminally ill from the treatable.

"And once an unproven substance is made legal for one group of patients," the FDA adds, "There would be no way to prevent access by others. Patients who have cancer in an early and controllable state could be putting their lives on the line by taking a worthless substance instead of seeking an effective treatment. Laetrile is now being promoted as a treatment for cancer in its early stages."

Laetrile supporters dominated the emotional aspects of the Kansas City hearing, often booing and jeering the scientific testimony.

The focus of most attention was Glen L. Rutherford, 60, of Conway Springs, Kan., whose suit to obtain Laetrile led to the court-ordered public hearing to compile an administrative rulemaking record.

Rutherford drew cheers when he countered the scientific testimony by saying "You people in authority consider all the rest of us a bunch of dummies."

The administrative record that resulted from the hearing will go to the U.S. District Court in Oklahoma City so the court can review the basis for the FDA's contention that Laetrile is a new drug that is not safe and effective.

PUC chief rebuffs utility

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Pacific Gas & Electric should consider belt tightening instead of asking for another rate increase in a period of drought-caused economic handship, the president of the state Public Utilities Commission said in a letter released Saturday.

The letter from Robert Batinovich to Bichard H. Peterson, board chairman of PG&E, said the most recent applications for general rate hikes come at a time when the utility announced first quarter earnings per share for 1977 have increased by 66 per cent.

Batinovich also pointed out that a previous PG&E rate increase application is still in hearing and that the PUC currently is considering requests for offset increases in natural gas rates for $67 million and in electric rates for $77 million.

"If the drought continues, and that most certainly appears plausible, the ratepayer will be saddled with additional economic hardship. In view of the commission's actions to expeditiously allow PG&E to recover the entire increased costs of generation brought about by the drought and the higher cost for purchases of natural gas, it would appear that your $292 million electric and gas general rate increases are untimely in this extreme period of economic hardship to California ratepayers."

Black Africa actions suggest Soviet in new imperial phase

WASHINGTON (AP) — A sharp increase in Soviet aid to Third World nations in the past two years and its expansion into black Africa suggest "the emergence of a new imperial phase in Russian history," a Library of Congress study says.

The study, released Saturday, said the contradiction between Soviet desires for detente and aggressive new actions in Africa carry the danger of "potential confrontation and war" with the West.

"Soviet actions during 1975 and 1976 reveal a continued commitment to the Third World, and an extension of its activities beyond the Eurasian continent and the traditional 'national liberation zone' into black Africa, suggesting the emergence of a new imperial phase in Russian history," the library's report said.

It said aggressive Soviet support for the victorious faction in the Angolan civil war is being interpreted by some experts as an indication of the new imperial phase. And it noted the Russians' role in building a black guerrilla force in Mozambique and Tanzania to fight against white-run Rhodesia.

It suggested an American response of "selective involvement" in those nonaligned nations in which the United States has the greatest interest. This approach "might strike a reasonable point between the unacceptable extremes of isolationism and globalism" in U.S. foreign policy, it said.

The study was requested by Rep. Larry Winn of Kansas, ranking Republican on the House International Relations Committee, and was released by the committee itself.

It was prepared by Dr. Joseph G. Whelan, the library's senior specialist in international affairs, and William B. Inglee, a research assistant. The library essentially compiles existing information and does not gather new information or make conclusions on its own.

The study said the conclusion that Soviet actions may suggest a new imperial phase is based on assessments by former Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and one of his chief aides in the Nixon and Ford administrations, Helmut Sonnenfeldt.

The United States has significant advantages over the Soviets in winning cooperation from non-aligned countries, including the scale and diversity of its trade, U.S. leadership in science and technology and its concept of democratic liberty, the report said.

"The Soviets have no assured destiny of success in the Third World, but the danger to the United States would seem to lie more in their perceptions, expectations and the willingness to act upon them," it continued.

"What the United States seems to need in its approach to the Third World is a vision of its proper role, a policy to give it structure and a broadbased democratic sanction of the Congress to give it strength, authority and a consensus," the study said.

Survivor of Bataan recalls agony he and brother shared

SAN DIEGO (AP)—Joe and Richard Errington were young brothers from the lettuce town of Salinas, Calif. in 1942 and knew agony in the World War II Bataan death march.

One came back. The other died a strange death.

"We were both in the 194th Tank Company, a National Guard unit from Salinas inducted into the regular Army. We were captured together on April 9, the day of the fall of Bataan. We made the death march together. We were still together until about August, 1943," said Joe Errington, 59, now of Garden Grove, Calif.

It was the last time he ever saw his year-younger brother, Richard, 23, by that time a skeleton of a man.

"When I joined, I weighed 180 pounds. When I was liberated, I weighed 98 pounds. I have BeriBeri. Even now, if I'm on my feet too long, my ankles swell up, my feet swell," said Errington of the death march and years of sickness and malnutrition that followed in Japanese prison camps.

It was not until after the war that Errington found out what happened to his brother, also a staff sergeant.

Errington, who is among 500 survivors of the fall of the Philippines attending a reunion of the American Defenders of Bataan and Corregidor, said for his mother's sake, he never will tell all he knows of his brother's death.

Jennie Errington, 86, a widow who still lives in Salinas, was brought to the convention this year by her son. She and other Gold Star mothers were toasted during a luncheon.

Errington was taken to Fukuoko Camp 12 in Japan in August of 1944 and was not released until Sept. 2, 1945. He heard nothing of Richard.

"My family thought both of us were dead," he said.

Errington said his first business after release was to begin scouring prison camps in Japan for his brother. "I started going from camp to camp, I used any transportation I could grab. Finally, I had to give up."

While Errington awaited shipment home, a man told him what happened to Richard. It was one of those horribly black tricks of fate in wartime.

"Richard went down in December, 1944. He was aboard a Japanese ship hit by a torpedo—an American torpedo. The man who told me was one of the few survivors. He knew Richard. He saw him killed," said Errington.

"Yes, I know exactly how he was killed," he added, "But I won't elaborate on it. There was no body, but she (their mother) accepts his death."

Richard was among 1,655 U. S. war prisoners aboard a Japan-bound freighter sunk by an American submarine. There were five survivors of the sinking, one of three such incidents.

Of the 70,000 U. S. soldiers, sailors, Marines and Army airmen captured in the fall of the Philippines, less than half lived until war's end. Of those, an estimated 3,500 are alive today.

Friday marked the 35th anniversary of the surrender of Corregidor, where the last handful of Americans fought until they had no more food, ammunition or medical supplies.

Three safe in Ontario house fire

Ontario firefighters extinguished a 4 a.m. blaze Saturday at the home of Donald Dressler, 1700 E. La Deny St., Ontario

Dressler, his wife and son all escaped the fire uninjured.

According to firefighters, the fire originated in an overstuffed chair in the den to the rear of the residence. Officials said the home was 50 per cent involved when they arrived at the scene.

Preliminary loss estimates were figured at $20,000 to the structure and $6,000 to contents.

Ethiopian peasants trained by Cubans for a 'people's war'

ADDIS ABABA, Ethiopia (AP) — Cuban military advisers are helping train thousands of Ethiopian peasants and workers for a "people's war" against antigovernment factions, Western diplomats say.

The diplomats said about 20 Cuban military advisers were in Ethiopia, with another 200 expected to arrive soon.

When Fidel Castro made a brief stop here during his Africa tour in March, Ethiopian leader Lt. Col. Mengistu Haile Mariam asked the Cuban president for advisers to help defeat resistance groups fighting in northern and western Ethiopia, the sources said.

Cuban troops helped a Marxist faction win a three-way civil war in Angola last year, and at least 10,000 Cubans are believed still in that central African nation. Cuban advisers have also been reported in Mozambique and a few other African nations.

Ethiopia's Marxist government has built two training camps near this capital city capable of handling 200,000 recruits. Truck convoys rumbling back and forth from the camps are becoming a familiar sight.

Last Thursday night, 56 trucks were seen, each jammed with some 50 ragged young Ethiopians. As they rode in the night darkness, they clapped, cheered and chanted slogans.

Two regular army soldiers driving a jeep with a machine gun brought up the rear of the convoy. It was not clear whether the jeep was there to guard the convoy or to deter conscripts from leaving.

The government has not said how this "people's army" will be deployed. But Western diplomats say it could be used to back regular army units in Gondar, formerly Begemdir, province.

Between 2,000 and 6,000 guerrillas of the rightist Ethiopian Democratic Union (EDU) have captured several towns in the province since the begining of the year.

The EDU was founded in 1975 by Ethiopians exiled by the late Emperor Haile Selassie. It is led by Gen. Iyassu Mengesha, who has been joined by soldiers and middle class-professionals fleeing the Marxist upheavals here.

The EDU is portrayed by Ethiopia's government-controlled media as fighting for a return of feudalism, which Ethiopia's revolution replaced. The EDU promises non-Marxist civilian rule.

"I am willing to fight against the EDU," said one Ethiopian worker, "I don't want the Emperor's men to return."

The other possible target for attack is the northern province of Eritrea, where secessionist guerrillas of the Eritrean Liberation Front (ELF) have waged a hit-and-run war for 15 years.

for lacerations and other minor injuries. They were reported under observation for possible head injuries Saturday night at Ontario Community Hospital.

Injured in the car were Deidra Weiwer, 26, Palm Springs who was treated for numerous lacerations, possible cervical and head injuries at Ontario Community Hospital before being transferred to San Bernardino County Hospital in guarded condition for serious injuries. Also in the car was John Robert, 30, of Texas Avenue in Pomona who was treated for numerous facial and arm lacerations and possible head injuries. Robert was reported under observation for head injuries at Chino General Hospital Saturday night.

Officials said no one in the semi-truck was hurt, but that both the van and car were totally destroyed.

Meanwhile, names were released of those injured in Friday night's accident.

The boy killed in the collision was Jesus Frausto of Corona. His sister, Canora, 18 months, was in critical condition Saturday night at Chino General Hospital.

The driver of the auto which collided with the Frausto car was identified as Hector Garcia, 44, of 14545 S. Grove Ave., Chino. Garcia, his wife, Maria and 8-year-old daughter Laura all escaped with minor injuries. They were treated at Ontario Community Hospital.

Pomona YMCA will launch funds effort

The Pomona Valley YMCA will begin a $760,000 campaign this week to expand its services in four communities.

Volunteer solicitors and others who are supporting the fund drive will start the campaign officially with a dinner at Griswold's Pavilion in Claremont Tuesday night. The event will begin with a social hour at 6 p.m. The Claremont High School Stage Band will play.

The dinner program will include a trio of professional entertainers and a brief talk by Rick Kay, Los Angeles Rams linebacker. James Kostoff, chairman of the campaign, will give the main speech. The theme is "The Promise of Youth."

Al Smith, president of the YMCA board of directors, will be master of ceremonies; the Rev. Leland Wilson of the La Verne Church of the Brethren will give the invocation; and the Rev. Dave Edwards of the Trinity United Methodist Church in Pomona will give the benediction.

Larry Woods, YMCA general director, expects about 400 persons to attend the dinner. Tickets at $4.75 each and tables of eight at $38 may be reserved by calling Woods at 629-9133.

The YMCA plans to establish permanent quarters for Claremont and another center to serve La Verne and San Dimas with part of the proceeds from the drive and to expand facilities at the Central Branch in Pomona with the rest. Both the La Verne-San Dimas and Claremont branches have been served from temporary quarters.

Klein named manager of circulation

Richard Klein, 38, assistant circulation manager of the Progress Bulletin, today was promoted to the position of circulation manager of the newspaper.

Klein succeeds John Ardelan, circulation manager for the past three years, who has resigned to accept the position of circulation manager of the Escondido Daily-Times Advocate.

Klein has been with the Progress Bulletin three years. He formerly was circulation manager of the Ontario Daily Report and the Victorville Daily Press.

Klein attended Chino High School and Chaffey College in Alta Loma.

Humphrey: leaving room to run again

ST. PAUL, Minn. (AP) — Sen. Hubert H. Humphrey, D-Minn., said Saturday that he"s leaving "a little wiggle room" in his announced decision not to seek another term in 1982.

"I wouldn't foreclose once and for all not being back in the Senate, but the odds are I'll finish this term," Humphrey said.

"I want to have a little wiggle room down the pike, just a little," said Humphrey, who will be 66 on May 27.

In a question and answer session, Humphrey said he wished David Frost's interviews with former President Richard M. Nixon had not been aired.

"There comes a time when you just ought to close the book on it," Humphrey said. "That was a program we could have gotten along without."

Humphrey said he perceived Nixon as "not leveling" and as "covering up," but he said the former president "won some points" for admitting he had let the nation down.

6 cities seek own county

LOS ANGELES (AP) — The county registrar's office says petitions seeking a vote on whether six South Bay cities should form their own county have enough signatures.

The drive seeks a South Bay County from the cities of Redondo Beach, Manhattan Beach, Hermosa Beach, Torrance, El Segundo and Palos Verdes Estates, all now part of Los Angeles County.

Heads Nigerian transport unit

Former MSAC student succeeds

Ade Owesekun is a former Mt. San Antonio College air traffic management student. He is a Nigerian. And today, Owesekun heads the Nigerian Federal Ministry of Transportation and Aviation.

Owesekun completed his air traffic control program at the college, then went to La Verne College to earn his bachelor's degree in business management before returning to his native land and his new job in the federal ministry.

Most MSAC graduates don't go that far away from the west coast. But today 30 of the college's air traffic management graduates are full-time professionals in Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) flight service stations, enroute traffic control centers and control towers all over California and in Arizona. And 33 are on the FAA's employment register, fully qualified and waiting for FAA processing to be hired.

Ignacio Melgoza of La Puente was the 30th MSAC student hired recently as a controller at the Air Route Traffic Control Center in Oakland.

The college's air traffic management program was developed in cooperation with the FAA, and is one of two such programs in California. Students like Owesekun and Melgoza receive extensive classroom and on-campus laboratory training, then recieve work experience each semester in FAA facilities around the Los Angeles Basin.

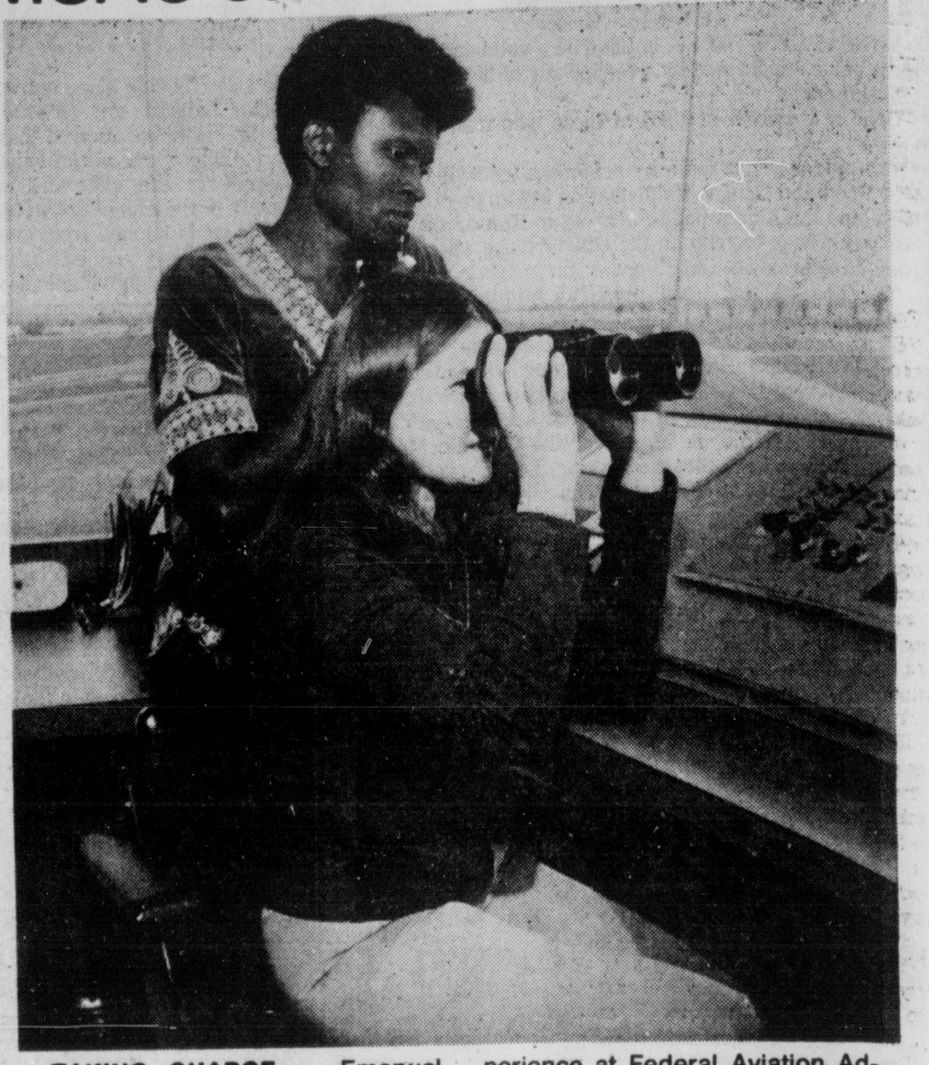
Jerry Yocum, tower chief at Brackett Field, La Verne, has four former MSAC students on his permanent staff today, and several of MSAC's current students are in training.



TAKING CHARGE — Emanuel Ogunde, standing, from Sierra Leone, and Linda Carlson of Diamond Bar, are two of dozens of students in the Mt. San Antonio College air traffic management program gaining-on-the job experience at Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) facilities throughout Southern California. MSAC is one of only two colleges in California offering actual on-site traffic management training.

"The program and facilities are excellent. Some of the best controllers we've ever had at Brackett have come from the college," Yocum said. "We feel, dollar for dollar, this is one of the best recruitment training programs the FAA has ever had."

John Du Miller of La Verne is a 1972 graduate of the MSAC air traffic management program. A controller specialist at Brackett now, he has gone through all phases of the program, from initial observation, to work experience, to now full-time professional.

In addition to his duties with the FAA, Du Miller also works in the college's aeronautics laboratory, assisting in the formulation and continuous up-grading of the air traffic courses.

Ted Ortega of Walnut, and Tim Berrow of Monterey Park are also graduates of the MSAC program now members of the professional staff.

Linda Carlson of Diamond Bar is currently a controller trainee at Brackett, and Emanuel Ogunde, from the African state of Sierra Leone, is a student observer.

Wes Galloway, MSAC air traffic management instructor, initiated the program at the college about six years ago. Today, almost every graduate has been hired by the FAA is or on the register awaiting hire.

Phillips Ranch zoning studied

A long agenda, topped by the proposed Phillips Ranch development, will confront the Pomona City Council on Monday night.

The council will consider whether to grant zone changes for the Phillips Ranch property, where tentative tract maps with over 1,100 homesites have been approved by the city's planning commission.

Based on comments from the council last week during a study session covering the Phillips Ranch proposals, the zone change will be supported.

Other items on the agenda for the 8 p.m. meeting include a proposed water rate increase that would hike the typical homeowner's monthly bill by about $1, and a proposal that the city approve the stipulated judgement establishing water rights in the Chino Basin.

That judgement would allow the city to continue pumping all the water it needs from the basin, but would require that the city pay fees necessary to replace water drawn beyond the city's "right" under the stipulation.

The council will also review a request from Larry Rubin, director of the Pomona Valley Juvenile Diversion Project, asking that the city fund the project at the rate of $1 per capita.

Committee meet slated Tuesday

Members of Pomona's Elementary School Aid Act (ESAA) district advisory committee will meet Tuesday at 7:30 p.m., at St. Joseph's School, 1200 W. Holt Ave.

The meetings have been held at several of the 15 schools in the ESAA project this year to acquaint members with programs and facilities.

An audio-visual presentation of the ESAA pilot project and a description of the instructional services offered by the Pilot Parent Development Component will be presented.

An update on the ESAA proposal for 1977-78 by C. Joseph Barfield, director of special projects, and a description of coming activities by LaVonne Caldwell, parent involvement specialist, are also on the agenda.

Lindbergh: 'The Lone Eagle' opened door to tomorrow

EDITOR'S NOTE: A half-century ago, there was a race of sorts among France, Britain and the United States to be first to fly the Atlantic nonstop. The United States, in the name of a man called Lindbergh, won. But all the world benefited, for "The Lone Eagle" and his 33½-hour flight led the way to commercial aviation and the space program.

By SAMUEL G. BLACKMAN
For Associated Press

NEW YORK (AP) — Before the main heavyweight bout at Yankee Stadium, Joe Humphries, the announcer, asked the crowd of 40,000 to rise. Pointing to the sky, he asked everyone to say a prayer "for a boy up there tonight who is carrying the hopes of all trueblooded Americans." A hush fell over the stadium.

At an Iron and Steel Institute banquet in New York City, the toastmaster pointed to the American flag and said: "I am proud to live under that flag. I am thinking of a young American boy who left this morning for Paris with a sandwich in his pocket. May God deliver him safely."

Will Rogers wrote in his daily newspaper column: "No attempt at jokes today. A slim, tall, bashful, smiling American boy is over the middle of the Atlantic Ocean where no lone human being has ever ventured before."

A drawing in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch by Daniel R. Fitzpatrick, which was to win a Pulitzer Prize, showed a tiny plane over a wide sea darkened by a threatening storm.

Indeed there was a little plane. A single-engine Ryan monoplane called "The Spirit of St. Louis." Inside, alone with his thoughts, two canteens of water and five sandwiches, was Charles A. Lindbergh. Age: 25. Occupation: air mail pilot.

He had taken off from Roosevelt Field, N.Y., in the early morning mist of May 20, 1927, clearing a tractor by 10 feet and telephone wires by 20 feet. He landed at Le Bourget Airport in Paris some 3,600 miles and 33½ hours later, the first person to fly the Atlantic nonstop.

But as he flew over England, only a few hours short of his goal, he looked far beyond the Paris landing:

"What limitless possibilities aviation holds when planes can fly nonstop between New York and Paris! The year will surely come when passengers and mail will fly every day from America to Europe... Possibly everyone will travel by air in another 50 years."

Fifty years? That's now.

We have gone far beyond Lindbergh's early expectations, not only in conquering the seas, but space as well. John Glenn, the first American to orbit the Earth, said Lindbergh's flight "triggered aviation to what followed — intercontinental travel and the space program. You need a catalyst to start anything. That's what Lindbergh's flight did."

Twelve hours passed from takeoff before Lindbergh, in his words, climbed over the fog, over the sea and into the night. By contrast, Glenn in his Mercury-Friendship 7 was on the dark side of the Earth 45 minutes after an early morning liftoff from Cape Canaveral, Fla., 35 years later.

Michael Collins, commander of Apollo 11 which took Neil Armstrong and Edwin Aldrin to the moon on July 20, 1969, said Lindbergh's flight not only "accelerated interest in aviation around the world" but was "certainly a piece in the jigsaw puzzle which led to the space program."

Collins, now director of the Smithsonian Institution's National Air and Space Museum, was asked if Apollo 11, on display at the museum, is as popular with visitors as "The Spirit of St. Louis."

"It is difficult to say," he replied. "But when people see 'The Spirit of St. Louis,' they see Lindbergh flying that plane. Apollo 11 looks like a lump on the floor."

"They see Lindbergh flying that plane."

Lindbergh became interested in flying when he was 20 years old. Born in Detroit on Feb. 4, 1902, he grew up in Little Falls, Minn. He worked on the family farm during World War I, entered the University of Wisconsin in 1920 to study mechanical engineering but left after a year and a half to take flying lessons in Lincoln, Neb. He barnstormed in the Midwest, and in March 1924 attended the Army Flying School at San Antonio, Texas. Graduated top man in his class, he was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Air Service Reserve in 1925.

Transatlantic flight activity had been heating up in the United States, Britain and France and Raymond Orteig offered $25,000 to anyone who could fly nonstop between New York and Paris.

"They see Lindbergh flying that plane."

He is in a curtain of mist as he heads over Long Island after takeoff at 7:54 a.m. after a night without sleep. His altitude is 200 feet, and his air speed is 105 m.p.h.

The haze thickens and the coast line is no longer visible. The haze clears over the Thames River between Norwich and New London, Conn. With his homemade periscope he sees the hills of New England through the clouds.

He loses the coastline as he leaves Cape Cod. At noon, he is over Nova Scotia where he has resolved to turn back if he finds it covered with fog. He spots some houses and wonders if his plane will be reported. There are storm clouds but he decides to go on. ..squalls, heavy rain, then patches of blue sky.

In his "cabin that floats through the air," now 500 feet above the sea, he heads for Newfoundland. He is over St. Johns as daylight fades, having covered 1,100 miles in 11 hours. No plane, he reminds himself, ever flew over Newfoundland before without landing. Ireland is 2,000 miles ahead, and he heads eastward "across two oceans, one of night and one of water."

Sleepiness was becoming a problem, and it was to plague him all night. He had seen a newspaper clipping that Nungesser had failed because he probably tried to pilot his plane all the way and had been unable to stay awake for 40 hours.

"I can barely stay awake," Lindbergh commented to himself, as related in his book, "The Spirit of St. Louis." "I can't let anything as trifling as sleep ruin the flight ... how wonderful if this really were a dream, and I

LONE EAGLE — A giant portrait of Charles A. Lindbergh looms over a visitor to the National Air and Space Museum in Washington, D.C. "With this flight," he noted after his famous New York to Paris flight, "aviation is shouldering its way from the stage of invention to the stage of usefulness." Now, 50 years later, Lindbergh's dream is a reality and man is preparing a way to the heavens.

Boon to science, or plague to man?

DNA—genetic engineering creates ominous scenario

EDITOR'S NOTE: It's been many years since a line of scientific research has provoked such an uproar. But then the implications of gene-splitting — recombinant DNA — seem unprecedented. The controversy has spilled far beyond the sedate realm of science, as this tale of two cities graphically illustrates.

ANN ARBOR, Mich. (AP) — If all goes well in laboratories being readied here for some of the most controversial scientific experiments since the A-bomb, history will smile on this quiet college town.

But if something goes wrong, Cambridge, Mass., may be judged more kindly.

Reason: Ann Arbor permitted the University of Michigan to decide for itself whether "gene splicing" could be done on campus. Cambridge fought Harvard all the way from city hall to Harvard Yard, which the mayor unceremoniously threatened to "pave" if the professors got out of hand.

The issue involves balancing freedom of scientific inquiry against the responsibility of local governments to protect their citizens. In addition, universities hard-pressed by inflation and recession could use the large amount of government research funds earmarked for studies of recombinant DNA — for deoxyribonucleic acid, the key genetic compound. They also stand to gain prestige from additional discoveries.

For scientists, there is the broad understanding that "DNA contains the secret of life — and also of winning the Nobel prize."

The biggest benefits — or hardest blows — could go to ordinary Americans, however, beginning with those living near Harvard and Michigan and the other universities readying themselves for gene splicing.

These people may be first to learn of progress made possible by the elegant new technology: Controls for genetically-determined diseases like hemophilia; crops that generate their own fertilizer, or vastly increased understanding of the way plants and animals pass their characteristics from one generation to the next.

Like these envisaged gains, the hazards are as yet only imagined, since nothing like this has ever been done before. Possible short-term dangers include escape of uncontrollable and potentially harmful microorganisms from laboratories. More speculatively, some fear that "genetic engineering" might some day enable dictators to control human development in what is being called "The Hitler Scenario."

The risks may or may not be science fiction. But already they have prompted researchers to impose constraints that are without precedent in modern science.

In Ann Arbor, the DNA debate remained an academic affair despite efforts of those who feared it to rally townspeople to their side. Professors David Jackson and Robert Helling, who wanted to conduct genesplicing experiments on campus, had most of the weight on their side from the start.

"Every advance carries risk," Jackson says. "To advocate a no-risk policy is to advocate paralysis. The problem is not to avoid all risk but to minimize it to an acceptable level, and we can do that."

At the top levels of administration, there was a strong predisposition to proceed cautiously, "airing the issue along the way to allow those who felt strongly about it to say so," as Alvin Zander, associate vice president for research, put it.

The critics' side of the question suffered from weak organization. No central figure of high academic rank stepped forward. Instead, the chief tactician's role fell to Susan Wright, an untenured assistant professor of humanities in the School of Engineering.

Drafting letters to scientists across the country, bicycling around town to organize meetings and petition drives, Ms. Wright carried her cause as far as she could. Largely at her insistence, the university on two occasions brought in well-known outside experts on gene splicing to describe the dangers involved.

Defeated on campus, the critics turned to the town, demanding citizen participation in decisions that might ultimately determine their fate. For a time, the protest gathered momentum. Donald could lie down on a cloud's soft, fluffy quilt and sleep ... I've lost command of my eyelids... they shut. I lift them with my fingers."

His thoughts drift back to fantasies of his childhood, to some experiences as a mail pilot, to farm life in Minnesota — "A feverish dream."

He sees icebergs ... his altitude varies 5,000 feet ... 7,500 ... 10,500 ... his flashlight beams on a strut ... ice! Should he turn back? No, he is nearer Ireland than New York . .. the coating of ice is thinner ... the clouds give way .. . he sees stars and mistakes them for ships ... dawn comes as he noses down to within 50 feet of the waves ... fog covers the sea ... he rises to 1,500 feet ... will the fog never end?.. . it dissolves and the sea appears ... brilliant light ... a speck on the water ... it's a boat ... several small boats . .. the coast can't be far away ... he glides down to within 50 feet.

"Which way is Ireland?" he shouts. No answer. He makes a second and third pass. Still no answer. He's wasting time and fuel and flies on . . . 27 hours have passed since he left New York.

Green fields ahead ... it's Ireland ... he picks out Valentia and Dingle Bay on the southwestern coast.

Now the news bulletins:

Theaters announce the plane's progress to audiences between acts. There are loud cheers when actress Alice Brady announces at the Ritz Theater in New York that Lindbergh is approaching France.

The sky is clear...he crosses England, the Channel.. .there's the coast of France...the sun is low as he reaches Cherbourg...he levels off at 4,000 feet to see the lights of Paris...now he's down to 2,000 feet...there's an airport.. .it must be Le Bourget.'

Now there are minute-to-minute news bulletins:

Paris — "An unknown airplane appeared over Le Bourget at 10:21 p.m. It is believed to be Lindbergh. There is great excitement."

"Paris May 21 — Lindbergh alighted at Le Bourget at 10:24 p.m."

He stopped his plane in the center of the airport and saw "the entire field covered with running figures."

"I am Charles Lindbergh," he said, introducing himself. He explained later that "I was afraid they might think I was somebody else."

He was rescued from the crowd by two French aviators and taken to the U.S. Embassy where he asked for "a bath and a glass of milk."

Lindbergh was to spend the rest of his life seeking refuge from hero worship and the publicity surrounding the kidnap-murder of his son. But he never forgot what he set out to do that day in May 50 years ago. He made goodwill flights to 75 cities in 48 states and Latin America to promote aviation. As a consultant to commercial airlines, he laid out transatlantic and transcontinental and Caribbean air routes.

But as much as he loved aviation, he also had an interest in conservation. Even as he flew across the Atlantic in 1927 he looked ahead with dread to "millions of planes flying around overhead. I love the sky's unbroken solitude," he mused. "I don't like to think of it cluttered up by aircraft, as roads are cluttered up by cars."

In later years, when conservation became a chief concern, he remarked, "If I had to choose, I would rather have birds than airplanes."

Remembering the "forgotten ones"

EDITOR'S NOTE: One doctor says that the people who have been killed in Ireland's sectarian war are the lucky ones. Lucky compared to the thousands maimed. Although the injured are generally called the forgotten ones, at least one group is trying to help them put their lives back together.

By ED BLANCHE
Associated Press Writer

BELFAST, Northern Ireland (AP) — Sammy Wilson is one of Northern Ireland's forgotten victims, one of the 18,000 men, women and children maimed and wounded in the province's sectarian war.

Two years ago his right leg was ripped off at the thigh when a bomb exploded in a north Belfast bar. Now he limps around on an artificial leg trying to get his shattered life together again.

Sammy is a 47-year-old Protestant. Before he was maimed he was a bus conductor, but now he faces an uncertain future.

It's been a long painful haul for him since March 14, 1975, when three young terrorists with guns blazing lobbed the bomb that crippled him in Conway's Bar in Greencastle.

But he says with unwitting irony: "I'm determined to stand on my own two feet. Otherwise, it's all been a waste."

Most people in this brawling province know, often to the exact grisly digit, that more than 1,720 people have been slain since Protestant and Roman Catholic extremists launched a terrorist campaign in 1969. Many of the dead are martyrs to one side or the other.

But it's staggering how few are aware of the number of wounded from the bombings, shootings, riots and fires. Even the figure of 18,000, police say, doesn't show the full cost of human misery that the conflict has caused. "We didn't bother to keep statistics on the wounded until the end of 1970," says one authority.

"There must be hundreds more we haven't listed. And that total doesn't include the people, especially kids, who'll need psychiatric care for years because of the violence."

"The people who've been killed are the lucky ones," said a doctor at Belfast's Royal Victoria Hospital.

"The people who've been maimed and blinded in this madness are the ones who

DNA research: it offers new vistas, great dangers—

Michael, an influential professor of psychology and a member of the prestigious Club of Rome, suggested that the "appropriate places to conduct such experiments are not universities but national laboratories isolated from population centers," like those used in some nuclear research.

The group targeted Ann Arbor's city council as the best place to gain exposure.

But Ann Arbor let the critics down. Long accustomed to trusting its university to do the right thing in technical matters, it could not be aroused by something as complicated as DNA.

The polite sparring in Ann Arbor was followed by a brawl in Cambridge that attracted a national following to the "Science follies."

This time the sides were more evenly matched.

But instead of a soft-spoken biology professor as mayor, Cambridge has Alfred Vellucci, who for years has built a successful political career baiting Harvard.

And in place of a harried assistant professor of humanities, critics of gene splicing in Cambridge were led by George Wald, a Nobel prize-winning Harvard biologist.

He took to NBC-TV's "Today" show to charge gene splicers with "lunging into something in a woeful state of ignorance." He also mentioned the possibility of escaping organisms causing "mysterious new diseases" like last year's outbreak of "Legionnaire's Disease" in Philadelphia.

Mail to one city council member was running 30 to 1 against allowing gene splicing in town, and feelings ran deep on campus.

"Some of us who want the research to go on are being vilified as right-wing creeps," complained a Harvard scientist.

Cambridge City Hall's old, wood-wainscoted chambers were packed with graduate students, curious townspeople and scientists who sweated together under the klieg lights while Vellucci warmed up the crowd by warning that he would stand for no technical jargon.

"Most of the people in this room, including myself, are lay people," the mayor told researchers, "so spell it out for us."

But when Harvard biologist Mark Ptashne tried to do just that, denying that gene splicing had ever produced a "known, dangerous organism," a council member fired off a blunt rejoinder.

"Just what the hell do you think you're going to do if you do produce one?"

The meeting ended with biologists in a state of near panic at Vellucci's resolution to ban all "moderate" and "high" risk gene-splicing activity within the city limits for two years.

When tempers cooled a few weeks later, the ban was cut to three months, but Vellucci's face-off had produced a major change in the politics of science. A new, five-member watchdog group called the Cambridge Biohazards Committee, to include the municipal commissioner of health and hospitals and the chairman of the public policy board, will oversee all DNA research.

"The board shows that scientists can't just do what they damned well please any more," notes Jonathan Beckwith, Harvard molecular genetics professor.

Not since the A-bomb have scientists been held so closely accountable to non-expert opinion of their research.

really suffer," he says. "They have to go on living."

"I don't remember much about the bombing," says Sammy. "I went into Conway's for a quick one between shifts. I'd just sat down when the young lads came in shooting and threw the bomb.

"I didn't know I'd lost my leg until several days later. I felt completely hopeless. I felt it was all over for me. I was a cripple. What could I do? My wife had died 18 months before the bombing. It all seemed so empty."

Jimmy Murphy is a Catholic. He used to be barman in north Belfast until he, too, was blown up in a bar and wounded in the head, side, leg and arm.

His right arm is partially paralyzed, and surgeons put a metal plate in it to replace a shattered bone. He's nervous, depressed and mortally afraid of going into a bar again, which means he can't pick up his old trade. The violence has wrecked his life.

His youngest son was assassinated in February, 1974, by Protestant terrorists who pumped five bullets into his head when he was out with a girlfriend.

"There's not much left for me at all," he said morosely. "It all looks bad. I'm 52 years old and it's all over. My wife's not working and I'm not good for anything any more."

Robert is a 22-year-old ex-British soldier. The bombers got him New Year's Eve, 1975, at the White Heather Bar in Dungannon, a longtime trouble spot.

He doesn't remember much about the explosion. "Something hit the back of my head and I was falling, falling. I thought I'd never hit the ground.

In the months that followed, his right leg was amputated, his stomach was chewed up, his kidneys damaged, his spine twisted and his back a mass of scars. They'd found a chair leg embedded in it.

Robert has taken a clerical course. Sammy's spinning rope. Jimmy's learning woodwork.

"The main objective is not simply to train people for new jobs they can handle," says Harry Knight, the director, "but to build up their confidence to return to society in a meaningful way, restore their self-respect."

Boxed chocolates are mom's favorite

Anna Jarvis launched 'Mother's Day'

"Honor thy mother" is a long-established tradition.

But Mother's Day officially began in America only 70 years ago when West Virginian Anna Jarvis held the first annual memorial service for her mother.

Since 1907, the day traditionally has been observed by giving gifts of love and appreciation. Today, it is celebrated on the second Sunday of May.

According to the National Confectioners Association, boxed chocolates are a Mother's Day favorite, making this holiday the fifth largest candy selling season of the year.

Many choose other methods of sending their greetings.

Telephone companies report jammed switchboards every year. Last year more than 12.9 million long-distance calls were logged nationally on Mother's Day, about twice the normal Sunday traffic.

Of course, every child's art is a masterpiece to Mom.

ONE MOTHER'S FAMILY

Mrs. Vian Amico, the blonde in the center, sits on the lawn of her Claremont home surrounded by 10 of her 11 children. She is the mother of four sets of twins, born consecutively. They're now 17, 16, 14 and 8. Missing daughter, 23, is in the service.

But get little attention

Mothers found in high places

Americans generally know a lot about the men they elect president but little about the women who get their Mother's Day cards.

"Because of President Jimmy Carter's campaign, almost everyone knows of Miss Lillian, the President's mother, and her service as a Peace Corps volunteer," said Sally Hopkins, chief researcher for Hallmark Cards.

"Rose Kennedy, John Kennedy's mother, is famous in her own right. But most of the presidents' mothers were not well known."

Theodore Roosevelt's mother, for example, was Martha Bulloch, a Georgian of aristocratic birth who remained loyal to the South during the Civil War.

"Her Southern sympathy undoubtedly caused some problems because her husband supported President Lincoln and was a close friend of the President," said Miss Hopkins.

Warren G. Harding's mother wanted her son to become a minister. So did Nancy Allison, an Abolitionist from Niles, Ohio.

Instead, her son, William McKinley, became the 25th President of the country and the third chief executive to die by an assassin's hand. The first two were Abraham Lincoln and James A. Garfield.

Sara Delano, the strong-willed mother of Franklin Delano Roosevelt, was of Flemish descent and independently wealthy.

"Sara tried to smother her son with a dictatorial kind of life, but FDR had a mind of his own," said Miss Hopkins.

Religion had been a dominant factor in the lives of most of the presidents' mothers. Dwight Eisenhower's mother, Ida Elizabeth Stover, was a pacifist and a member of a fundamentalist sect called the River Brethren.

British-born Jessie Woodrow, mother of Woodrow Wilson, was the daughter of a Presbyterian minister.

Sleeping in a mountain cabin at night and spending the days hiking, swimming, playing games and eating good food sounds like an ideal vacation for a child. Right?

But for many of Pomona's disadvantaged boys and girls, it will remain only a fantasy unless someone outside their immediate families cares enough to pay their ways.

This summer, through the Donrey Public Foundation, Inc.'s Send-a-kid-to-camp Drive, a boy or a girl, between the ages of 7 and 12, may spend one week in a Malibu Mountain summer camp for $65.

Camp dates are Aug. 2-8.

Sports are part of the program planned for youngsters who receive camperships through Donrey Public Foundation, Inc.'s Send-a-kid-to-camp Drive now underway. Boys and girls will spend Aug. 2-8 in the Malibu Mountains.

After 4 sets of twins, plus 3

'Motherhood' has special meaning for area parent

By BOB SWETNAM
PB Staff Writer

As a mother, Mrs. Vian Amico of Claremont may hold the title, unofficially of course, of the World's Greatest Mother of Twins.

She gave birth to four sets of twins consecutively.

In addition, she has three single-birth children, bringing to 11 the total number of her children.

Her children range in age from 8 to 23. The twins are 17, 16, 14 and 8.

The father of this family, Joseph Amico, died in 1975.

"When he was alive and the kids were younger," said Mrs. Amico, "we used to joke about the twins. That first set surprised us. But you wouldn't believe how surprising it is to have four sets!"

The twins are Joel and Joanna, 17; Janet and Marc, 16; Valerie and Vanessa, 14; and Tina and Gina, 8.

The eldest daughter, Debbie, 23, is in the Armed Services and helps with the family's finances. "The children don't want me to work, so they each do what they can," said Mrs. Amico.

Lisa, 20, is married and has a family of her own. She lives in Chino and still finds time to spend with her mother and the kids in Claremont.

Mothering 11 children, including four sets of twins, is "crazy, and a lot of fun," claims Mrs. Amico, a youthful-appearing blonde.

"Everyone always asks me how I stand it and I always tell them it has been fun," she grins. "We try not to remember the sad times, just the happiness and the good times."

Mrs. Amico admitted that they "sometimes" have trouble making ends meet, "but it always seems to work itself out.

"This family probably has more fun together than about any family around. It we hadn't had all of these kids in our family, I don't see how life could have been as wonderful as it is."

Joel, 18, the man in the family, laughingly piped in, "I don't know how wonderful the zero population growth people might think it is."

With a family that large, however, life can become complicated and expensive, Mrs. Amico admits.

"We spend about $150 a week on food. During a typical week, the kids will drink 28 half-gallons of milk, and eat 14 loaves of bread and about 35 pounds of meat," she said.

They do 60 loads of washing a week.

The Amico family shares humor, an openness and a togetherness and love that shines through.

"We're thankful for what we have and thankful that so many people have helped us," said Mrs. Amico.

"People may think I'm crazy, but I'm thankful for all these kids."

As an afterthought, she smiled and added, "It could have been worse. I could have had four sets of triplets."

More than $125,000 already this year

Vandalism 'costs' heavy at local schools

By DAN NIEBRUGGE
PB Staff Writer

Vandalism cost nine local school districts well over $200,000 during the 1975-76 school year and has already cost the schools in the valley more than $125,000 so far this year.

The nine districts: Alta Loma, Bonita, Chaffey, Chino, Claremont, Ontario-Montclair, Pomona, Upland and Walnut, contain 130 schools in total and serve over 100,000 students.

By and large, vandalism in one community is much the same as another. A check with maintence directors throughout the valley shows that spray painting and glass breakage are the most common problems, with heavy damage coming when vandals force entry into a classroom or office. They often overturn furniture, destroy light fixtures and rip up floors and walls.

Districts have begun combating the problem in a number of ways. While little can be done for spray paint and graffiti damage other than $130-an-hour sandblasting work (the charge applies only to the time the machinery is in operation), most local districts are moving toward replacement of broken glass with flexible clear plastic sheets from which rocks and other missiles simply rebound.

The plastic is purchased usually in 4 by 8 foot sheets and can be cut to size with a saw. Walt Montgomery, director of maintenance for the Claremont school district, notes that while the plastic is unbreakable, it can be scratched and defaced. Still, the only glass purchased in Claremont these days, says Montgomery, is for table tops.

The district has enjoyed a decrease in its vandalism costs this year with a new program in which each school is given a vandalism account at the start of the year from which funds are withdrawn to pay for repairs. Funds remaining in the account at the end of the school year may be used by the school for whatever purposes it sees fit.

Forced entry is a more severe problem. Mel Fergot, maintenance director in the Walnut Valley school district, says district architects are no longer designing buildings with windows next to doors. The reason? State law forbids the installation of deadbolt locks on school doors because of the fire hazard. Entry by breaking the glass and turning the doorknob then becomes basic.

By the same token, says Pomona school district maintenance director Marvin "Red" Daniels, panic bars on double cafeteria or auditorium doors may not be chained shut. Here it becomes a simple matter for them to be pulled open.

In Walnut Valley, says Fergot, the district and citizens formed a vandalism committee which has now outgrown the district and become a community group. Fergot's vandalism bill last year was $31,000 but has declined to $21,000 for the same period this year.

Like other districts, said Fergot, Walnut has tried intrusion alarm systems, guard dogs and security patrols as well as increased lighting; all in an attempt to discourage vandals.

"In some districts up north," said Fergot, "I've heard they have tried turning off all the lights at the school hoping the darkness will keep them away."

The Chaffey Joint Union High School District reports the worst problem with vandalism among the West End school districts.

The district has recorded $70,000 in damage for 1975-76 and while figures were unavailable for this year, estimates set costs as high or higher this year, says Jack Lundquist, director of facilities.

Let people make decision

If ever there was a proposition which should only be decided by a vote of the people it is the proposal by Assemblyman Vic Fazio which would saddle the taxpayers with the electioneering costs of aspirants to public office.

While the bill, AB 1372, in its present form would burden the voters with only the campaign costs of those seeking statewide and legislative offices, such a scheme once started would quickly filter down to all elective offices, including the dogcatcher.

This notion of purifying elections has already commenced in connection with presidential elections. Congressmen are now endeavoring to extend it to include themselves. Fazio merely brings it along to the state level.

Fazio, in peacock fashion, brags that his bill is sponsored by Common Cause and the League of Women Voters. Common Cause is a "do-gooder" organization, which despite its claims of broad membership, is dominated by a small group dedicated to the peculiar ideas of one John Gardner. It has spent millions lobbying to weaken the ability of others to lobby.

The League of Women Voters is composed of well meaning dowagers who, although sincere in purpose, seldom do their own thinking and consequently are occasionally manipulated into support positions on issues.

The idea of full disclosure of campaign contributions and the personal financial interests of consequence of the candidates is sound. And, as Fazio states, we have it. The idea of taxing citizens to finance the political ambitions of every Tom, Dick and Harry is a bummer.

Fazio attempts to weed out the "Tom, Dick and Harrys" by burdensome signature gathering requirements thus seemingly defeating his expressed goal of opening the system to a broader spectrum of candidates.

His contention that limiting individual contributions and substituting public funding for private donations will make candidates debt free of "special interests" is sophomoric. It would merely subject the candidates to the pressures of highly organized special interests, such as labor and teacher organizations, which can field hordes of volunteer campaign workers. That would leave the candidates unable or unwilling to get that kind of support without the ability to compete because their funds are shut off.

Fazio has a cute little provision in his bill which would effectively blank out all but the affluent candidates from presenting their qualifications to the voters via the official ballot pamphlet. It would assess each candidate from $4 to $10 per 1,000 registered voters for inclusion of such statement.

Also his limitation on the amount of personal funds which any candidate could spend in his own behalf would seem to be in conflict with the Constitution. Only recently the U.S. Supreme Court ruled on this point in connection with initiative campaigns.

Viewing the proposal for public financing of campaigns from a distance an appropriate question would seem to be why the need after 200 years of experience otherwise. And what price must the public pay for honesty in government?

In the final analysis, the issue seems to be simply whether it is a legitimate function of government to tax citizens to further the political ambitions of persons who are personally reprehensible to them? This is an issue of so great moment that it hardly seems proper for those in office, who will reap the benefit of the passage of such a program, to decide. If Fazio sincerely believes public funding of campaigns is the desire of the majority the fair way to determine that is to put the issue on the ballot.

Think on these things

Keeping our priorities in the right place — keeping one's perspective — is probably one of the hardest lessons in life. It is so easy to let things of no real meaning control the most important events of our lives.

What really counts? What makes it more important than something else — and what governs the decision? Is it pride or tradition or is it simply that we haven't thought of it on the scale of what is really necessary and what is not?

It is so essential to get our priorities all in a row according to their importance — and then feel the relief of not having to agonize over something that doesn't really matter.

There are situations and conditions we secretly know we're going to have to face sometime, but for now — let them lie quietly while we grow enough to handle them.

We are wiser than we know — we see, but we do not see. We don't see because we know we are not prepared to take on more than we are able to cope with, to act without destroying who we are within ourselves.

Whatever it is that lies in the back of the mind like a hot coal — or at times like a lump of ice that will not melt, the sole purpose is a reminder to grow, to expand, to stretch our minds and spirits until we have eliminated the impossible.

Justice has become a mockery

Dear Editor:

We are in an era where the rich are getting richer and the poor are getting poorer. We are in an era where in many cases a person can get more by being on welfare than by working. We are in an era where people have lost self respect and pride. We are in an era where there is no trust in law and order and those who enforce it, beginning with the courts. Justice has become a mockery. A person can kill someone and get a 30-day sentence in a refurbished cell and confined at their leisure, while another person violating a traffic law may get the book thrown at him.

It is way past due that teen-agers are permitted to commit crimes, even kill, plunder, destroy property and maim, and be released without even their names being known. It is time that equal punishment be meted out to anyone who can hold a gun in their hands. It is time the names of these teen-agers and their parents be made known to the public so the public has a chance to defend itself.

There was an old adage that crime does not pay. Our leaders from a president on down have changed that in the minds of many. Now, even if those who are confined for a while are unlucky enough to have been guilty of something, they reap a harvest of millions by writing books, memoirs, and making speeches, and many get pensions from the government (taxpayer).

Wake up America and let the world know we have had enough from the corrupters and chiselers, from the thieves and vandals, from the liars and cheats who are forcing us into oblivion.

Lots of brass in Gen. Brown

WASHINGTON — Gen. George Brown, the brass-hatted blabbermouth who heads the Joint Chiefs of Staff, has managed to insult American Jews, Israel, Iran and Great Britain in succession. He has even suggested that the constitutional right to privacy be ignored by wholesale opening of citizens' mail.

Now the tart-tongued general has vented his wrath against Congress. But the Pentagon, we have discovered, has managed to make it appear that Brown was actually praising the legislators.

In a long interview last year with writer and cartoonist Ranan Lurie, Brown charged that Congress lacked the courage to stand up to the Soviet Union in Angola. Although the Joint Chiefs traditionally refrain from criticizing Congress, Brown said brashly:

"We certainly didn't act that way (courageously) in Angola. You know we didn't. Congress prohibited us from spending money to provide some balance to the Soviet initiative . . ."

The Pentagon later released a transcript of the interview, but amazingly, it quoted Brown as praising Congress. "No one involved in Congress is prohibiting us from spending money" to counter Soviet intervention, the military version said.

Admittedly, the tape is unclear on first hearing, as we learned from listening to it ourselves. Pentagon officials acknowledged their transcript was wrong but insisted it was only an inadvertent mistake.

In the past, the loose-lipped Brown has decried Jewish "ownership" of American newspapers and banks, called Israel a "burden" on the United States, and described Britain's military as "pathetic."

Brown has not heard the end of this latest brouhaha. For Lurie, who broke many of the stories about Brown's previous insults, is now charging the Pentagon with covering up the general's attack on Congress.

POWER PLAY — In a secretly recorded telephone conversation, a Federal Power Commission official has admitted that his agency is favoring Texas utility magnates at the expense of consumers.

Carter has urged that regional electricity systems hook up with each other. This would cut rates and save power by allowing electricity to move across state lines as the need arises.

Most of Texas, however, is not connected to the nation's power system. And most of the huge private utilities in Texas want to keep it that way. The electricity moguls complain that buying new equipment for the hook-ups would cut into their profits. But they also want to avoid regulation by the FPC — which would come with a nationwide hook-up.

A 1972 study by the Power Commission estimated that linking up Texas utilities to neighboring states could save the consumers almost $200 million by 1980. The Nixon Administration was then courting the utilities and the commission was filled with pro-industry Texans, including counsel Gordon Gooch and Commissioner Rush Moody. Indeed, Gooch now represents Texas utilities fighting the proposed hook-up. Understandably, the 1972 study came to nothing.

In recent days, the FPC has done another study. But mysteriously, the key chapter on how much the Texas hook-up now would save consumers has been left out.

On April 11, an FPC official admitted in a taped telephone talk with pro-consumer utility men that the chapter actually had been prepared. It was deliberately omitted by the FPC brass, he conceded, to buy time for the Texas utilities.

"A chapter . . . has been eliminated," his interrogators say. Did it relate to the Texas hook-up?

"That's correct," agreed the FPC official.

"What's in it?" he was asked.

"Yeah, I am just wondering how to handle this," the official demurred. "Of course, what you are asking me is to give you the missing . . . information without supplying the missing chapter and . . ."

"We don't want to put you in a bind . . ." the consumer man said.

Astonishingly, the FPC official then revealed that the first three chapters were released to see whether they were "satisfactory . . . to the utilities . . . I think this is the reason (his FPC bosses) want to withhold the cost chapter, to find out is that satisfactory (to the Texas utility magnates)."

Middle-level staffers at FPC also blamed their bosses for suppressing the new cost data. The chapter was written, one told us digustedly, but "it was washed out . . . it was controversial."

A secret General Accounting Office report also blasts the FPC. The draft report, stamped not to be released "under any circumstances," said the FPC let down the public by failing to push for the money-saving hook-ups.

Footnote: An FPC spokesman denied the agency was knuckling under to the big Texas utilities. He said the missing chapter was held back because officials thought it "may cause some concern," but will be included in the final report.

AIR TURBULENCE: In our April 17 column, we used an estimate of 94 per cent for the nation's air "safety record." We are now convinced that although air safety needs many improvements, the actual safety figure is higher. Scheduled airlines, for instance, have a safety record of over 99 per cent.

WATCH ON WASTE — Citizens besiege their congressmen with complaints about Social Security, which is ensnarled in bureaucratic red tape. So the Social Security Administration sends about 6,000 mailgrams a month to congressmen, assuring them routinely that it is looking into the constituents' cases. But at $1.13 apiece, these meaningless interim replies cost the taxpayers about $72,000 a year.

Paul Harvey

Crime and no punishment

The late J. Edgar Hoover once stirred up a hornet's nest of righteous wrath when he said, "Any youngster old enough to commit a man's crime is old enough to take a man's punishment."

We were not ready to accept that.

To this day, policemen are reluctant to shoot at a fleeing fugitive for fear he might turn out to be "a mere youngster."

But youngsters are nowhere near as "mere" as they used to be.

New York sought to dry up hard drug traffic with a new law — stiffer penalties for adult pushers.

A boy arrested on a Harlem street — in possession of $94,000 worth of heroin — was 11. So the criminal court had to send him home to his mother.

What do we do to punish juveniles who are less juvenile than heretofore?

A New York gun club is offering a $200 reward for crime victims who shoot and kill robbers; says it's time for the "good guys" to defend themselves.

But you know society is not going to sit still for such bounty hunting when the robber is a young boy — or girl.

Last year a record 43 per cent of all suspects arrested were under 18.

New Orleans' suspected French Quarter stabber — believed responsible for four slayings — is 16!

The easy out these days is for parents to blame "the sitter" — and the No. 1 "sitter" is television.

Nielsen says children under 5 watch television an average of 23½ hours a week — multiplied by 17 years that's 20,000 hours. TV gets more time than any other human activity except sleep.

Without doubt, it is a potent influence.

But while television seeks to moderate this negative influence, and while the government allocates $3.2 million to employ students to police schoolhouse crime, and while New Yorkers are invited to become bounty hunters, a federal prosecutor in Philadelphia is getting no public response to his remedial suggestion.

U.S. Atty. David Marston says there is already a law which would deter juvenile crime if we would enforce it.

It is part of a child slavery law which has been on the books for a hundred years.

It is a law which says that, when an underage child commits any crime, his parents face trial. It is they who must pay any fine. It is they who would go to jail.

Doc Peirsol

Just in jest

According to a recent newspaper report, the President, as a part of his energy conservation program, is threatening to outlaw the "big guzzlers." Would it be sacreligious to suggest that one good place to start would be with Brother Billy?

* * *

Time and again in the days of my youth I was reminded that if I took care of the pennies, the dollars would take care of themselves. But today even our national government is about to make that good old-fashioned financial advice obsolete. Because it is estimated that in a few short years it will cost two cents to make a one-cent piece, government officials are planning to stop making pennies.

Virginia Payette

On the faults of 'no-fault'

Just for fun, let's play around with a spaced-out idea: what would our lives be like if the government declared insurance illegal?

Never mind "no fault;" how about no insurance? Of any kind: life, health, accident, automobile, fire, flood, theft, malpractice, the works.

Sounds crazy, expensive and catastrophic, doesn't it? Totally impractical. We'd all be wiped out tomorrow.

And maybe so. But we might all be a little more honest, drive a little more carefully, maybe even take better care of ourselves.

Think about it for a minute.

Sit down and make a list of all the slings and arrows we pay to be protected against. Or (let's get it straight) to be protected against paying for with our own money.

Then add up the various premiums you fork over year after year after year. Sometimes without ever collecting a penny in return.

And while you're at it, toss in the repairs and replacements you've financed on your own. Partly because your loss was less than the "deductible," and partly because you were afraid to bother the insurance company for fear they'd cancel your policy.

(Nothing, you know, riles an underwriter more than to have some picky customer take that in-good-hands stuff seriously.)

There's even an increasing number of rich folks who keep their real gems in the bank vault and wear fakes to fool jewelry thieves. All because a piece of the rock usually costs almost as much as their real rocks did in the first place.

Now (maybe you'd better get out your calculator; the back of an old envelope isn't big enough for this job) add up the increases in the costs of doctor and dental bills and lawyer fees. Because, not only do you have to pay your own ever-more-expensive premiums, you have to finance the skyrocketing costs of professional malpractice coverage, too.

Pause for a moment to let the computer cool off while you ponder another morbid fact: not only does malpractice insurance cost you a bundle, it could cost you your life.

Not because some fumble-fingers mis-slices your innards, but because a lot of doctors would rather not take any risks.

Suddenly, locks for houses and cars would get better . . . losing businesses would stop burning down . . . no more hospitals full of hangnail patients . . . no more idiot damage awards.

Next item: add up the increases in the price of just about everything that's sold by manufacturers who have to carry liability insurance against the possibility of a customer injuring himself with one of their products. (Likely as not because he failed to follow directions.)

Plus a few more pennies tucked on the price tag to cover the cost of workmen's compensation. Or supermarket or department store protection against a shopper getting tangled up in a turnstile.

By now you'll begin to get the idea that expensive as it could be to do without insurance, you're getting no bargain now. You may not always get what you pay for, but you always pay.

And we've only started. Have you forgotten that great insurer of them all — Uncle Sam?

What else would you call Social Security, unemployment payments, and cheap federal crime insurance of up to $10,000 for burglary and theft?

The only difference here is that the commercial companies collect "premiums" and do business on a voluntary basis. The U.S. government calls them "taxes" and there's nothing voluntary about it.

Also, when a private insurer pays out more than he takes in, he's out of business. When Washington finds itself in the same fix (and both SS and jobless benefits are flirting with red ink) it just raises taxes or prints a little money.

It might be more than interesting to see how much, without any insurance at all, prices tumble. We might save so much we could afford to finance a fender repair.

Ann Landers

I forgot — until I buried her

Dear Ann Landers: Many years ago you printed a letter on Mother's Day. It touched my heart like no other letter I have ever read.

I clipped that column and carried it in my wallet. It's time for a rerun. The column is barely readable — and those who do not remember it should have a chance to read it again.

My thanks in advance, Ann, for all the people you get back on the track when they wander. For example — me. — A Detroit Faithful

Dear Faithful: Happy to oblige.

Dear Ann Landers: Yesterday was the saddest day of my life. I buried my mother. As I looked at her lovely, kind face, for the very last time, many thoughts crossed my mind.

I recalled the times I meant to give her a phone call and ask if there was anything she needed. I seldom got around to it.

I recalled the evenings when our sitter folded out at the last minute and we had theater tickets so we "drafted" Mom to sit. She never once said she has other plans although I'm sure she must have had. On those occasions I always promised myself one day we'd buy an extra ticket and take Mom along, but we never did.

I recalled the day I ran into Mom in the bakery. Her winter coat looked shabby and worn. I thought, "Gee, I've got to take Mom downtown and buy her a new coat." But I was too busy.

I recalled her last birthday. We sent an azalea plant but couldn't get over to see her. The East-West football game was on that afternoon and the boss was giving a party that night.

I recalled the last time I saw Mom alive. It was at my cousin's wedding. She looked so old. I told myself, "I must send Mom to Florida to visit her brother and get a little sun." But I never got around to buying the ticket.

If only I could turn the clock back, Ann. I'd buy Mom that coat, take her to the theater, spend every birthday with her and send her any place she wanted to go. But it's too late and I am heartsick. Please print this letter. Maybe if I had seen one like it I would have done things differently — Grieving Son

Dear Son: Here's your letter — and on a most appropriate day.

Dear Ann Landers: I was divorced three months ago from a woman I never should have married in the first place. We were wrong for each other going in. But that's not the problem I'm writing about. Actually, it's my ex-mother-in-law.

She is a remarkable person. I liked her instantly when we first met seven years ago. One of the saddest things about the divorce was knowing she would not be my mother-in-law any longer.

Now the question: Mother's Day will be here soon. I would like very much to send my former mother-in-law flowers. I have not seen her since the divorce but I know she feels kindly toward me. What is your advice? — Still Devoted

Dear Still: Too bad you didn't write to me a few days earlier. Most florest shops are closed today. But send the flowers tomorrow — it won't be too late to make her happy.

Marmaduke

Right noun for night women

Maybe you've played the word game wherein you try to match up the appropriate collective noun with the species it identifies. Like "pride" of lions. Or "herd" of cattle. Or "flock" of geese. This comes to mind because a customer asks what collective noun is proper for a group of prostitutes. Believe that's a reference to Clifton Fadiman's claim that such could be called a jam of tarts, a flourish of strumpets, an essay of Trollope's, an anthology of pros, or a pride of lions.

Rarely does a female mouse ever go more than 40 feet from her nest. She's timid. That male mouse, though, He's brave. He sometimes goes as far as 50 feet from his nest.

QUERIES FROM CLIENTS.

Q. "What's the difference between a 'sneer' and a 'leer'?"

A. You sneer with the mouth, you leer with the eyes.

Q. "Louie, can you name the world's first nightclub?"

A. Can indeed. The LeBal des Anglains established in 1843 at Paris, France.

Q. "Are there any red-haired Arabs?"

A. Certainly. It was the Arabs, you know, who discovered henna.

Q. "What's the equivalent surname in France for our name Smith?"

A. LaFevre.

Q. "What's the smallest United States possession?"

A. Kingman Reef. About 1,000 miles south of Hawaii. It's 150 feet long and 120 feet wide at high tide.

Classical music lovers, who care more than I, will tell you that the true name of Chopin's "Minute Waltz" was "The Waltz of the Little Dog." A piece inspired by George Sand's toy poodle.

Do you know what a raindrop really looks like while it's in the air? No, not like the little comet with a tail. Like a doughnut with a hole not cut all the way through.

Teaching kitten not to hunt

DEAR DR. MILLER: We have two loves — cats and birds. We have an impenetrable fence around the backyard. We build it when we bought the house. Even cats can't climb it. We developed it into a bird sanctuary, or did until Lucky, our cat, came on the scene 14 years ago. From then on, it was nip and tuck for the birds. The smart ones survived, the dumb didn't. We're now looking for a kitten replacement for our departed Lucky. Is there any way we can get a youngster who will share the backyard with the birds and not look on them as lunch? — W.A.

DEAR W.A.: A youngster's much less likely to develop into a feather-filching feline if it's selected from a litter of non-hunting adults, if it's carried off by six weeks of age (before it's likely to have begun to hunt, anyway). Finally, it it's kept indoors while a kitten, it's less likely to learn to hunt on its own.

DEAR DR. MILLER: Sometimes I'm afraid Jonah, my pet goldfish, might be lonesome. Dad said I can only have one pet at a time so I can't get a playmate for Jonah. What I'm wondering is, will Jonah be less lonesome in the small bowl he's in right now, or would he like a bigger one. Dad says the little one's cozier and he'd just be more lonesome in a bigger one. I thought he might like more room to race around in. I'd like on more opinion. Yours, please. — D.R.

DEAR D.R.: Bigger is better, in my opinion. At least for Jonah's jetting about. If he can't have a companion, he'd undoubtedly enjoy more elbow room. It can make a whale of a difference to Jonah's enjoyment of life, and his longevity for that matter, if he's not crowded. (Goldfish too often are.)

DEAR DR. MILLER: Both of my hamsters died from a wet tail disease called salmonellosis. I was told this happens all the time. How do you get hamsters which don't have it. — W.A.

DEAR W.A.: Don't purchase more animals from the same sickly source. Among a commercially-offered batch of hamsters, all of the specimens should be clear-eyed, active, with smooth coats, and no sign of diarrhea. A private source is sometimes safest. But no new animal should be brought into a premises that's had a salmonella or other infection, without a thorough cleanup and disinfection program first.

For Monday, May 9, 1977

TAURUS (April 20-May 20) You may find it necessary to modify your stance if key people oppose what you're doing. You've more to gain by compromise.

GEMINI (May 21-June 20) If you have any wild schemes today, don't employ expensive equipment or materials. It could prove to be a costly experiment.

CANCER (June 21-July 22) Weigh carefully any new methods to change your business practices today. Unforseen flaws could have long-range detrimental effects.

LEO (July 23-Aug. 22) Attempts to sidestep problems today may have unfortunate results. Face up to the situation with patience and courage.

VIRGO (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) Schedule your duties in a workable sequence today. You're not an octopus who can grasp many things at once.

LIBRA (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) It's highly possible you'll spend more money than you intend to today. If you're with a free-spending crowd you'll follow suit.

SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 22) The situation at home may be a bit shaky today. Don't rock the domestic boat. It won't take much to tip it over.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 21) Observe the traffic signals and speed limit today. A heavy foot on the gas may attract an unfriendly man in blue.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) You could abandon your normal caution today and break something you prize, or you might even lend it to someone irresponsible.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20-Feb. 19) Subdue self-serving tendencies when it comes to your family or associates today. Selfish actions will draw sharp disapproval.

PISCES (Feb. 20-March 20) Keep in mind today that you'll harvest what you now sow. Take steps to assure your future crop of flowers, not thorns.

ARIES (March 21-April 19) In financial dealings with a friend, be sure this person knows what he or she is doing. A blunder could cost you plenty.

Your Birthday, May 9, 1977

There will be no lack of ambitious targets and goals this year. The problem lies in trying to bite off more than you can chew.

Letter to a mother who is 80

Mother's Day greeting cards are traditionally written for young mothers . . . the breakfast-in-bed, sticky milk kisses, 50-cent dusting powder variety.

But where is the greeting card for the 80-year-old mother who lost "Dad" last year, whose only son is in Alaska and who needs a cheery, "Hi There!" like a pair of gym shorts.

There are thousands of these women around today who have been retired mentally, physically, domestically, and emotionally to be "made comfortable."

I've been saving this letter for a whole year because it's so beautiful and couldn't have been written by anyone other than a 56-year-old son in Alaska who could not be with his mother. The mother was so moved by it, she wanted it shared.

"I hope you have a happy time on your day. The important thing is to make it a happy day. It's another year that God has granted you. You know He has you on earth for a reason so you must live it fully for Him. You have been one of His angels on earth for a long time, helping so many lonely and lost souls that have needed you. Every little act of kindness is listed in His book and I'm sure the book is so heavy there isn't anyone could lift it. There are still many that need the little lift that just being close to you gives them. You are a Very Important Person to me of course, but to so many others. Remembering this will give you a special kind of inner strength.

I know the years have made your body tired. As my 56 years already are weighing me down. You have something to drive down that tired feeling though that I and so many others don't — the strength of the true love of everyone you have ever contacted. Lack of this is the thing that brings sadness to so many. If you try, I'll bet you can feel its warmth and strengthening power at any given moment, day or night. So look ahead to the coming year. It has so many lovely things in store if you will only reach for them.

Take the mirror from in front of your face, so you can stop looking over your shoulder. What's behind you is now gone, the road is in front of you and each turn in it has something new and different.

Look at Mother Nature's work in your own front yard. The old rose bush still bears the most beautiful flowers. The tree that has had part of it taken away reaches out its leafy arms and is fuller and more beautiful in its enlargement of age. Sprout and blossom with this year so that those that look upon you can feel good and enjoy your own special beauty. This is my wish."

Maybe your mother doesn't need a reminder of the past today. Maybe she needs a reason for tomorrow.

Dr. Lamb

Potassium a basic element

DEAR DR. LAMB — Of late I have been hearing about potassium. Different people are getting tests for potassium in their systems so it comes from more than one doctor's orders. My dictionary lists 10 different kinds of potassium but not one pertaining to the body. One person is extremely tired and potassium is a help. Another has had headaches and takes potassium by eating bananas. What do we need potassium for? Where do we find it in our foods? How much do we need? Is too much dangerous? Is this a new theory?

DEAR READER — There is only one kind of potassium. It is one of the basic chemical elements, as are sodium, oxygen, hydrogen, iron and others. You have probably looked at a list of potassium salts. When an element such as sodium combines with another element such as chlorine it forms a salt — in this case sodium chloride, ordinary table salt. Potassium belongs to the same family of elements as sodium and it unites with chlorine to form potassium chloride — also a salt. It may also combine with other elements to form other potassium salts.

Whereas sodium chloride is abundant outside the cells, in your blood in body fluids, potassium salts are abundant inside the cells. The potassium phosphate salts are a vital part of the basic metabolic machinery inside your cells. Your cells cannot function properly without adequate amounts of potassium salts. Decreased amounts of potassium can lead to weakness. It is important inside the cells making up the muscle fibers of the heart. A low level may lead to irregularities of the heart.

Too much potassium affects the cells that control the heartbeat. This may cause the heart to slow and even stop. Surgeons use potassium to stop the heart when doing open heart surgery.

Your kidneys normally eliminate any excess potassium your body does not need. That is why you can eat foods rich in potassium and never worry about it. If the kidneys are diseased and unable to eliminate potassium it can build up in the body and become dangerous.

No, potassium is not a new theory. We have known about it for a long time, and its essential role in normal body function. But we have learned a lot more about it in recent years.

Your best food sources for potassium are fruits and fruit juices. That is why the one person you mentioned was advised to eat bananas. Orange juice is an excellent source but all the fruits and fruit juices are good for potassium. A diet rich in fruits and fruit juices will provide an abundance of potassium without danger to the individual.

We see a lot more cases now of people having a low potassium level because of new medicines. Most of the medicine used to eliminate body water — the so-called water pills — will cause the kidneys to flush out sodium and also potassium. These medicines are commonly used for people who have high blood pressure, heart disease or fluid retention for any reason. As a result the more "water pills" prescribed the greater is the need to emphasize the importance of a diet that provides an adequate amount of potassium.

For information on a balanced diet and the amounts of vitamins and minerals you need send 50 cents for The Health Letter number 4-6, Balanced Diet, Recommended Daily Dietary Allowances (RDA). Send a long, stamped, self-addressed envelope for mailing. Address your letter to Dr. Lamb in care of this newspaper, P.O. Box 1551, Radio City Station, New York, NY 10019.

Heart nine lures two sets

By OSWALD and JAMES JACOBY

Practically every pair in the Olympiad bid the heart slam. Not that they indulged in such simple bidding as we show in the box. Still, they all got to the 20 per cent slam. All but two players made it by the simple expedient of taking the heart finesse, then laying down the ace of hearts and dropping the king and jack together.

Both players who failed to make the slam were tripped up by the nine of hearts. One man led the 10 of hearts from dummy and East covered with the king. West disdained a false card and dropped the nine. Now the unfortunate declarer decided that East had been dealt king-jack-six. He returned to dummy, led a heart, finessed the eight and lost to West's jack.

The other declarer went down because Benito Garrozzo of Italy opened that nine of hearts. Again East's king fell to South's ace. Again declarer went to dummy to finesse against that jack and again the jack showed up in the West hand to defeat the slam.

Counseling Corner

By R. CLIFF WATERS
Marriage and Family Counselor

When problems arise with children and teen-agers in families, one frequent cry that is heard is that "they don't listen to me, don't accept me." Listening and accepting are key factors in coping with problems and bringing people together.

Children all too frequently learn that talking to their parents is not helpful and often not even safe. Children quit talking when they perceive that their parents have quit listening. Parents who learn to listen effectively to their children communicate acceptance and caring. A child must feel that he is being accepted regardless of his problems and fears if he is to share openly.

It is one thing for a parent to feel acceptance toward a child; but quite a different thing to make that acceptance felt. Specific communication skills are required to be able to do this and some are nonverbal.

Not intervening in a child's activities can frequently show acceptance. When no one is intruding, interfering or checking up on him he feels he is doing well. Passive listening may also convey acceptance. Saying nothing is a powerful nonverbal message.

Talk is essential, but how parents talk is crucial. One of the most effective and constructive ways of responding to children's feeling-messages or problem-messages is with an invitation to say more. Statements such as "This seems like something important to you" or "I'd like to hear about it, tell me more" open the door. Active listening is required to keep it open.

Active listening is an intense relationship between the sender and the receiver. It is aimed at getting a level or so beneath the surface of events. In active listening, the receiver tries to hear and understand not only the words spoken but also the feelings that underlie those words — what the message really means. Then he puts this understanding into his own words and gives it back so that the sender knows clearly that he has been heard. It is important that the receiver does not send a message of his own, such as criticism, opinion or advice. He gives back only what he feels the sender's message meant — nothing more, nothing less.

Active listening is valuable for several reasons. It allows children to express angry and hurt feelings without fear of punishment or judgment. It promotes a relationship of warmth between parent and child. It frees children from troublesome feelings by encouraging them to express such feelings openly. It facilitates problem-solving by the child and influences the child to be more willing to listen to the parents' thoughts and ideas.

Most importantly, however, active listening encourages honest and direct communication while simultaneously promoting feelings of acceptance.

Often I have reflected on the anatomy of the human body and have decided there must be a good reason why we have two ears and only one mouth: Maybe we need to listen twice as much as we talk. So many problems are resolved by active listening and acceptance.

Says Lewis marketing chief

Time running out for valley home buyers

Time is running out for the buyer who expects to purchase a single-family detached home for under $50,000, believes Randall W. Lewis, vice-president in charge of marketing for Lewis Homes.

"And it's already beginning to be slim pickings in finding a home under that figure which measures up to the American family's tastes in interior refinements, yard space and location," he adds. "Market pressures are working against such expectations."

There are still builders, however, who are making an effort to satisfy the wants of the under $50,000, and Lewis counts his family-owned building firm among them.

"At our Highlands development in Etiwanda, we've put our volume building technology to work to bring in single-family residences priced from $39,800 to $46,700. Financing as low as 7 per cent interest is available, as well as the usual VA, VHA, Cal-Vet or conventional terms.

"And these are by no means just basic plans, Lewis said. "Each home at The Highlands has two bathrooms, one with stall shower and the other with tub bath. Pullman cabinets have cultured marble tops. Kitchens are equipped with continuous-cleaning oven, dishwasher, range and disposal unit. There are dining areas and pantries."

Included in the purchase price is wall-to-wall carpeting in living rooms, hallways and master bedrooms. Window drapes in living room and all bedrooms are another builder-installed feature.

The homes provide three or four-bedroom convenience, each bedroom having an overhead ceiling light to protect family members from having to grope for a table lamp in a darkened room.

Lewis also noted that each home in The Highlands' Phase II unit commands a 7,200-square foot lot site in a section of Etiwanda with spectacular mountain views.

The Highlands is reached from the San Bernardino Freeway to the Haven Avenue exit in Ontario (at the Ontario Motor Speedway), then north to Foothill Boulevard, east one and three-fourth miles to Rochester Avenue and north (left) to Church Street.

L.V. development open

M.J. Brock & Sons, Inc. announced that its Centennial Homes-La Verne development is now open, with 40 homes available in Phase I at prices ranging from $52,950 to $57,950.

A total of 89 single-family homes will be offered during the course of the development, with lot sizes averaging 7,200 square feet. FHA, VA and conventional financing are available. Occupancy is expected in late July.

Four different models are offered, ranging from 1,310 square feet to 1,584 square feet of living space.

The Sequoia (Plan 200) is a one-story home with three bedrooms, 2 baths and a large country kitchen. The master bedroom has a fully separate and luxurious master bath.

The Carlsbad (Plan 600) is also a one-story home, but has four bedrooms, 2 baths and a family nook, which sets off the abundant woodburning fireplace in the living room. The master bedroom includes a private bath and large walk-in closet. The two-car garage houses and laundry service area.

The Pelham (Plan 800) offers three bedrooms, 2 baths and a large country kitchen in its one-story configuration. A fireplace is situated in the living room, and the master bedroom has its own bath and walk-in closet.

The Holyoke (Plan 900), the largest of the four models, provides four bedrooms, 2 baths, formal dining room and a family room — perfect for entertaining or big family get-togethers.

Standard features include wood shake roofs, woodburning fireplaces, carpeting in the living room, hallways and master bedroom, hardwood cabinets, dead bolt locks on the front doors and smoke alarm systems, to name a few.

The sales trailer is open from 10 a.m. to dusk and is located on Benton, one block east of Wheeler and south of Foothill.

M.J. Brock & Sons, Inc. is an INA Corporation company with more than 54 years of experience in home building in California.

For housing progress

Hall of Fame induction set

Eighteen persons who contributed significantly to the progress of America's housing in the 1940's will be the first to be inducted into the newly established Housing Hall of Fame at ceremonies to be held May 10, on the front plaza of the National Housing Center in Washington.

Patricia Roberts Harris, Secretary of the Department of Housing and Urban Development will be the featured speaker. She will be joined on the platform by the National Housing Center's Board of Governors who selected those being honored, leaders of the National Association of Home Builders, and other dignitaries from housing related trade groups and the government.

Those named this first year to the Housing Hall of Fame were selected for their achievements during the decade of the 1940s. Next year's selections will be from the '50s and then the '60s and '70s followed by a return to all periods in America's history.

Bas-relief portraits of each individual together with an engraved inscription outlining their contributions to housing will be permanently displayed in a reserve area of the National Housing Center. Each recipient will be presented a medallion.

The individuals to be honored by the Housing Hall of Fame for 1977 have been divided into four categories:

Coldwell Banker loans up

Coldwell Banker Management Corp., one of the nation's largest administrators of real estate loan portfolios, recently announced that the volume of its real estate loan servicing portfolio has topped $1 billion.

In announcing the real estate finance industry milestone, Robert F. Moore, vice president and manager of Coldwell Banker's loan administration division, pointed out that the firm's portfolio contained approximately 11,700 permanent loans when the $1 billion mark was reached. About 78 per cent, or $780 million, of the loans under servicing contracts relates to financing on income-producing properties. The remaining 22 per cent, $220 million, consists of residential loans.

Coldwell Banker began offering real estate finance services in San Francisco in 1939. The firm's recent announcement of its Chicago finance office opening brought to 14 the number of Coldwell Banker real estate financing offices.

Coldwell Banker Management Corp. is one of the companies of Coldwell Banker (NYSE/PSE), a real estate and real estate - related service firm with a staff of more than 3,900 operating 186 offices from 120 locations in the United States.

Record third-quarter earnings

Silvercrest Industries, Inc., mobile home builders with plants in Anaheim, Norwalk and Woodland, CA., and Woodburn, OR. recently reported record earnings for the third-quarter in the 9 months ended March 31, 1977. Sales for the third-quarter were $16,690,000 versus $12,053,000, an increase of 38.5 per cent over the comparative period of Fiscal 1976.

Pre-tax income was $1,214,000 as compared to $436,000. Net income increased by 162.7 per cent to $612,000 or $.47 a share, versus $233,000 or $.18 a share for the third quarter of the previous fiscal year.

For the nine month period ended March 31 sales were $44,021,000 versus $32,304,000 for the previous fiscal year, a 36.3 per cent increase. Pre tax income was $2,052,000 as compared to $1,173,000. Net income of $1,036,000 or $.80 a share rose 71.5 per cent as compared to $604,000 or $.46 a share last year.

L.A. Realty board seminar set

Two Los Angeles area attorneys will be the principal speakers at a real estate educational seminar and luncheon at the Biltmore Hotel in Los Angeles May 14, from 8:45 a.m. to 2:30 p.m. The event is sponsored by the 4,000-member Los Angeles Board of Realtors.

Michael J. Brickman will speak on "Estate Planning for Real Estate Brokers and Sales Licensees," while Samuel K. Freshman will talk on "Buying for Your Own Account."

Tickets may be obtained through the Board at 3550 Wilshire Boulevard in Los Angeles, or by phoning 381-5134, and are $25 until May 6, $30 thereafter.

Realtors' marketing session set

A two-day marketing session, open to the public and designed to create ideas and expose real estate investment properties to brokers and clients, is being offered by the Investment Division of the California Association of Realtors.

The Host Airport Hotel, 6945 Airport Blvd., Sacramento, will be the site of the session on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, May 19, 20 and 21, according to Realtor Ernest A. Spencer of Richmond, Investment Division chairman for the 100,000-member Realtor's Association. Realtor Louise Parker of Sacramento will be session director.

Spencer stated that registrants will hear a team of outstanding moderators explore varied marketing ideas as well as listen to some of the most experienced exchangors in the state.

Among those marketing areas to be presented are multiple dwelling units, apartments, motels and hotels, commercial-industrial buildings, mobile home parks, ranch and acreage, land and lots and many others.

Spencer emphasized that because reservations are limited, persons interested in attending should submit their registration checks immediately.

Cost is $30 for division members, $45 for non-members. Checks should be made payable to California Association of Realtors, Attention: Investment Division, 505 Shatto Place, Los Angeles, California 90020.

Curbs sought in market speculation

SAN DIEGO — Real Estate speculators can expect to pay a higher down payment and higher interest rates than bona fide homebuyers if they finance new acquisitions through Home Federal Savings and Loan Association of San Diego.

"We are trying to promote home ownership for the majority of homebuyers — the person who buys a home to live in," said Senior Vice President Bob Wills, who is manager of Home Federal's Real Estate Loan Division. "Those persons who are speculating in real estate are buying homes and reselling them, sometimes making thousands of dollars profit, at the expense of persons buying homes to live in.

"We believe the influx of speculators in the housing market will tend to drive up the price of homes for the average homebuyer, so this week we took steps to put a damper on this trend," Wills said.

The new rate for non-owner occupied homes requires a 30 per cent down payment and the interest rate on these loans is a quarter of a per cent higher than the prime home loan rate, he said.

Top Red Carpet salespersons set

Red Carpet Realtors of Pomona, Chino, Claremont, and West Covina announced their top sales associates of the month of March.

John Tillman of Red Carpet Realtors Pomona office was named top producing associate of the Pomona office. John has been a resident of Pomona for 14 years along with his wife, Lillian, and their two children. He joined Red Carpet in 1975.

Gene Beamon was named top producer for Red Carpet Realtors of Chino. A former Aerospace employe, he has been with Red Carpet since March of 1976.

Frank Dean of Red Carpet Realtors West Covina, was named top producing salesman of his office. A Pomona resident for 14 years, Frank is a former Post office letter carrier in which he was for 12 years. He joined Red Carpet Realtors in Jan. 1977 and is already approaching close to the million dollar club.

Harold Roush of Red Carpet Realtors, Claremont, was named top producing associate. A former resident of West Virginia he now resides in Claremont. He has been associated with Red Carpet since May 1976.

All were honored at the monthly breakfast for the Pomona, Chino, Claremont, and West Covina Red Carpet Realtors offices owned by Damon Petta and Walt Akin.

Vandalism costs heavy—

tario High School, suffering the most from vandals, has a security guard with a dog on duty every night.

OHS has been hit in every way possible, says Joe Palmisano, maintenance director for the district. Although not an act of vandalism, some kids jumped the night guard once, took his keys and made off with $12,000 worth of tools. At Chaffey High School, says Palmisano, the school's tiger mascot statue has been vandalized at a cost of $3,500 this year.

The Ontario-Montclair School District is presently in the process of making a decision on how to cut its losses to vandalism estimated at $45,000 this year. Full-time security patrols are being considered as a preventive measure.

In both the Upland and Bonita districts, school spokesmen indicate that vandalism is not a heavy concern. Bonita officials estimate their vandalism will go up $500 to $6,000 this year with most of that increase blamed on inflation. In the Upland district, $14,000 was the cost last year. A similar figure is estimated for year..

Stacy Nelson, business manager for the Alta Loma district, says, "Our area isn't that susceptible to vandalism." With only a $2,000 bill for vandalism last year, Nelson seems correct. The district has only four schools.

In Chino, Chino High School had $2,000 in broken windows alone this year, said Al Searfoss, assistant superintendent for business. Despite that loss, Searfoss says vandalism is not a major problem in the district. So far this year the district is about $2,000 under its $12,000 vandalism expenditure of last year.

The school officials do catch vandals occasionally, and when they do most seek restitution from the vandal or his or her parents.

In Walnut, Fergot says they haven't caught many, but with those vandals nabbed the district has had good luck in getting paid.

Similar opinions are reflected by the Upland and Alta Loma school district officials.

Ontario-Montclair school district officials claim they can't get parents to take responsibility for vandalism. And because of that, little money has been paid for damage done to district buildings.

Two Snoopy firms accused

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two firms that sell distributorships for Snoopy products have been accused by the state attorney general's office of illegal misrepresentation, fraudulent business practices and unfair competition.

Dept. Atty. Gen. Albert Sheldon filed the civil suit Thursday in Superior Court. Named were Marketing Division Inc. and Allied Investment Diversified Inc. of Woodland Hills.

The suit claims the firms falsely promised customers display racks, training and high profits.

COLLEGEVILLE, Minn. (AP) — The silence of a Benedictine monastery has given the Rev. Henry Bryan Hays the spiritual tempo he needs to create opera.

He has composed six of them in his 56 years — four at St. John's Abbey in Collegeville, and two amid the din of a world he left some two decades ago.

"To me, the most beautiful sound in the world is silence," Father Hays says. "I can create music only in silence."

His silent, cloistered world also has its penalties. Father Hays, who seldom makes contact with the professional music world, has not heard much of his music performed.

But he is luckier than most. His 1975 opera, "The Little Match Girl," was given 11 performances recently at the College of St. Benedict. Two pianos performed the orchestra part and the singers were not professionals.

But the performance was attended by Philip Brunelle, director of the Minnesota Opera Company, who expressed an admiration for the work. Father Hays says he now harbors hopes that some of his music will some day be performed by a professional opera company.

The monastery is an essential part of his creative life, Father Hays says, because the life of a monk is inward-turning. "Creation is a mystery," he says. "One finds it by going into oneself."

"Finding myself and refinding my art were synonymous."

Father Hays was born in Tennessee, the oldest child of a poor farmer. In 1939 he won a scholarship to the Chicago Music College.

Children to receive foundation camperships will be selected by Capt. Daniel Birks of the Pomona Salvation Army Corps. They will spend the week at one of two Salvation Army Corps camps: Camp Mountain Crags or Camp Gilmore.

Parents, or other persons, wishing to submit the names of children may call the Pomona Corps office at 623-1579, or stop by the building at 454 W. Orange Grove Ave., Pomona.

Organizations or individuals wishing to contribute to the campership fund may make checks payable to Donrey Public Foundation, Inc., and mail them to P. O. Box 2708, Pomona 91766.

All funds contributed go directly towards camperships. There are no administrative costs to this program. Also, contributions are tax deductible.

For the boys and girls who receive the camperships, their one-week stay in the mountains probably will be their first real vacations.

Most will come from single-parent families headed by mothers and who live in poverty.

Margaret is one such child. Linda is another. They do not know each other, but their lives are similar. Their fathers and mothers are divorced and in each case, remarried. But their new stepfathers have deserted their mothers and both their families are living on welfare.

At 10, the girls are old enough to realize they are not to expect too much. Vacations cost money, and that mother does not have. Can you help?

CINDEE EBERSOLE

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Ebersole of Claremont announce the engagement of their daughter, Cindee, to Jeff Draper of Pomona.

The bride-to-be is currently employed at Alpha Beta. She is a 1975 graduate of San Diego State where she majored in family studies and consumer sciences.

Mr. Draper, son of Mr. and Mrs. Marvin Draper of Pomona, is employed at Alpha Beta. He attended Mesa College and the University of San Diego and will attend Cal Poly Pomona.

The couple will be married June 11 at United Methodist Church, Ontario.

Nutrition program planned

Richard Jafolla, nutrition consultant, teacher and author, will be the speaker at the meeting of Pomona Valley Chapter, American Nutrition Society, Tuesday.

The group will meet at 7:30 p.m. at Claremont Public Library.

Mr. Jafolla is on the board of trustees of the Life Therapy Institute in Desert Hot Springs, where he completed advanced studies in the science of nutrition and body management.

He will explain in detail why senility occurs, how it can be prevented and what can be done to reverse it. More information about the organization may be obtained by calling 626-6974 or 626-5004.

Wrinkle ward-off

Wrinkles around the eyes can appear at any age if you have very fine skin. To help ward them off, try wearing a protective cream around the eyes all day.

BENEFITED FROM FUND

Mrs. David Leighty, left, introduces her twin daughters, Marie and Ruth Ann, to Mrs. William Ariss, auxiliary breakfast chairman, and Mrs. Walter McKay, right, Sick Baby Fund chairman, as they review the 10-month-old twins' health history. The twins were born prematurely and spent one month in the hospital.

Pomona Valley Hospital Auxiliary

Annual May Breakfast slated

Members and guests of the Women's Auxiliary of Pomona Valley Community Hospital will enjoy the 39th annual May Breakfast Thursday at 10 a.m. at the Ebell clubhouse in Pomona.

The program will feature Angie Papadakus, humorist, with "Something to Laugh About in These Crying Times."

She has entertained numerous club audiences and is one of a handful of women gag writers in the country. Her work appears in 39 national publications from Readers Digest to National Lampoon. She also gag writes for cartoonists, columnists, comedians and greeting card companies. She teaches a writing class at Harbor College and is a Los Angeles commissioner of the Department of Public Social Service. In addition, she heads her own advertising agency.

Also featured on the program will be Lorrayne Harris, widely known valley ballad and folksinger, as well as young members of the Celestial Choir of First Baptist Church in Pomona, who will sing songs from "It's a Miracle."

Proceeds from the breakfast will benefit the auxiliary's Sick Baby Fund. The fund enables the organization to assist worthy families with babies' and young children's hospital bills when other funds are not available.

In addition, the auxiliary gives scholarships to qualifying high school graduates in the hospital junior volunteer program who are continuing their education in preparation for a medically related career.

The fund is also supported throughout the year by members who volunteer their services in the hospital gift shop and assist parents in ordering photographs of their newborn infants.

The auxiliary also donates a large part of its funds each year to the hospital for new equipment and facilities in the neo-natal intensive care nursery, pediatrics and other areas.

At a recent annual meeting of the hospital, Miss Edith Frances Eells, president, presented a $34,000 check to Robert Burwell, administrator, as the third payment on the auxiliary pledge of $150,000 to cover the entire cost of patient monitoring equipment in the new critical care unit of the hospital.

More than half of the 425 auxiliary members are active as volunteers in services which add a special personal dimension throughout the hospital. In addition to formerly mentioned activities performed by members, they also assist with patient mail delivery and staff the Satellite Blood Donor Center every Thursday, answer inquiries and assist visitors in the critical care area, feed the handicapped patients their noon meal and act as receptionists in the surgical waiting room.

Mrs. Wilma Temple, director of volunteers, coordinates all in-service programs for the auxiliary.

Reservations for the breakfast may be made with the ticket chairman, Miss Virginia Parker, 622-3406.

Betrothal revealed

Miss Lupe Veloz of San Dimas and John Mutschler of La Verne are engaged.

The bride-elect, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Gabriel Veloz of San Dimas, graduated from San Dimas High School and now attends Chaffey College. She is employed by Safian Medical Clinic in Pomona.

The future bridegroom, son of Mr. and Mrs. William Mutschler of La Verne, graduated from Bonita High School. He attends Cal Poly Pomona and is employed by Foothill Data. A double-ring wedding is planned.

Club events

Native Daughters

"Spanish Roots of Early California" will be traced by Mrs. Lloyd Franklyn Wheeler of Claremont at a program Tuesday at 8 p.m. in the Assistance League hall, 693 N. Palomares St., Pomona, for Native Daughters Chapter.

The talk will be preceded by a potluck dinner for members and candidates for membership.

Reservations may be made with Mrs. Alphonse B. Fages, Mrs. Louis Baiz or Mrs. Edwin M. Greenwald.

The speaker is a recently initiated member of Native Daughters and a native of Pomona who recently settled in Claremont following the retirement of her husband, a native Pomonan who was for 34 years with Southern California Edison Company. His parents were Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Franklin Wheeler, who came to Pomona in 1911.

Her parents are Mr. and Mrs. A. True Hartshorn of La Verne.

WCTU unit meeting set

The La Verne Woman's Christian Temperance Union will hear a talk by Ruth Weaver on "What we can do" when the group meets at 2 p.m., Tuesday, in the chapel at West Hillcrest Homes. Lydia Harper and Jenny Via will present the music program.

The prayer concern is "Homes of America" and the program is open to all interested persons.

The vice president, Jane Wingard, will preside at the meeting.

Club takes tour

The PBX Club of Pomona will tour the new Tamco Melt Shop located at Ameron Steel and Wire Division in Etiwanda when the unit meets at 7:15 p.m., Tuesday.

In charge of arrangements is June Crane and she will take reservations for the tour.

A business meeting and election of officers will be held later that night.

At the recent state convention of PBX Clubs in Sacramento, Mary Buettner of the Pomona club was elected state treasurer. She is employed at the Progress Bulletin. Jerry Morgan of the Whittier club was named president.

The meeting is open to all interested PBX operators.

Pen Women schedule luncheon

The Arbor restaurant in Upland has been chosen for the annual spring luncheon of the branch of National League of American Pen Women to be held at 12:30 p.m.

Reservations for the final event of the year are to be made with Miss Marjorie Armstrong. Artist members of the branch will display their recent work and Dr. Ora O'Toole will give an illustrated slide talk on women artists.

Clubwomen plan final luncheon

The Upland Woman's Club has charted its final luncheon meeting of the year Tuesday at noon at the clubhouse.

Entertainment will be provided by the musical team of Pam and Jimmy Rhodes. Pam complements her husband's organ keyboard artistry with her rich, mezzo soprano voice as they offer nostalgic melodies.

The club has scheduled a tea meeting at 1:30 p.m., May 24, at the clubhouse at which time officers will be installed.

Spring means it's garage sale season

By JEAN BARNES

A garage sale is still the second best method of disposing of unwanted things, according to our local "expert." A sanitary landfill ranks first.

As inevitably as spring cleaning, garage sale season has arrived. In most households the pronouncement produces no great whoop of enthusiasm. Yet, someone must clear away the stock of informal clutter that has been considered too good to throw away — yet not good enough to keep.

Depending upon the amount of "merchandise" you have, you may decide to "go it alone" or co-op with someone. However, if it looks as if it's too much work, scout your community for one who will do the work for a small percentage of the total sales.

In our town, Carol W. is such a person. It's a part-time business for her but she is very knowledgeable on the subject of collectibles and antiques as well as used clothing and broken toasters.

Carol is the mother of two daughters and wife of a publishing executive. She started her business three years ago, after spending several years as a garage sale "addict." "I found myself spending two or three days every week going to sales."

She has some good collectibles to show for her time. For instance, she displayed a sterling silver trumpet vase (art deco) that she bought for $5. Her basket collection which threatens to expand to the attic and basement areas has many choice items and most were acquired at garage sales.

Her reason for starting her part-time business was to enable her to spend more money on her collecting. "Once you're past the beginner phase, you raise your sights and want to buy the better and more expensive things.

"Most people who hire me, don't realize what they have and think of it as just junk." Carol is scrupulously honest and advises a client about the value of any antique of collectibles they plan to sell. "I often recommend that they have a really good piece appraised before selling it. I don't want to take advantage of someone's ignorance," she explained.

She advises that before you hire someone to hold your sale you should ask for references and settle on a fee beforehand. And, if you plan to part with collector's items, provide any information about them you have, such as age, history and condition.

If this interests you in creating your own part-time business, Carol suggests that you be prepared for hard work and that you know your merchandise and prices in your area. Remember, too, that a satisfied customer is good advertising and will yield referrals for other sales.

And for all garage sale'ers this spring, "Relax and enjoy the experience. If you like to meet people, you'll have a ball," she concluded.

Unimpressive at first glance

EDITOR'S NOTE: How extensive is poverty in the United States? It depends on which yardstick you use. But no matter how you interpret it, Lyndon Johnson's Great Society programs have been effective in lifting some families out of poverty.

By TERRY KIRKPATRICK
AP Newsfeatures Writer

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thirteen years and hundreds of billions of dollars after war was declared on poverty, a new administration is taking its own look at the results. What will it find?

At first glance, an unimpressive record considering the high hopes and huge sums of money that launched the quest for a Great Society.

Despite a four-fold increase in public spending on social welfare in the decade following President Johnson's call to arms, 26 million people are still poor, down only about 30 per cent from 1964.

But from a deeper inspection by several groups emerges a different picture. It appears that the definition of poverty adopted by the government — the definition by which 26 million are considered poor — doesn't measure the fastest growing type of government aid.

That is "in-kind" assistance: Food stamps, hot lunches, housing subsidies, medical care, job training and other non-cash benefits that don't show up when income is tallied to determine if a family is poor.

Although the logic of doing so can be challenged, changing the poverty definition to account for in-kind benefits doubles, to 60 per cent, the reduction in poverty since 1964, as Dr. John Korbel of the Congressional Budget Office found out.

His report this year was prompted by former Sen. Walter Mondale's expression of a growing concern in Congress over the success of President Johnson's Great Society programs.

"Looking at the programs targeted primarily on the poor, much of the recent rapid growth has been in the in-kind transfer programs, rather than cash assistance," Korbel said.

"While cash assistance expenditures grew about fourfold, in-kind transfer payments to individuals increased sixteen-fold, from $2.3 billion in fiscal year 1965 to $37.9 billion by fiscal year 1975. This growth is not reflected in official poverty statistics because in-kind benefits are not counted as income."

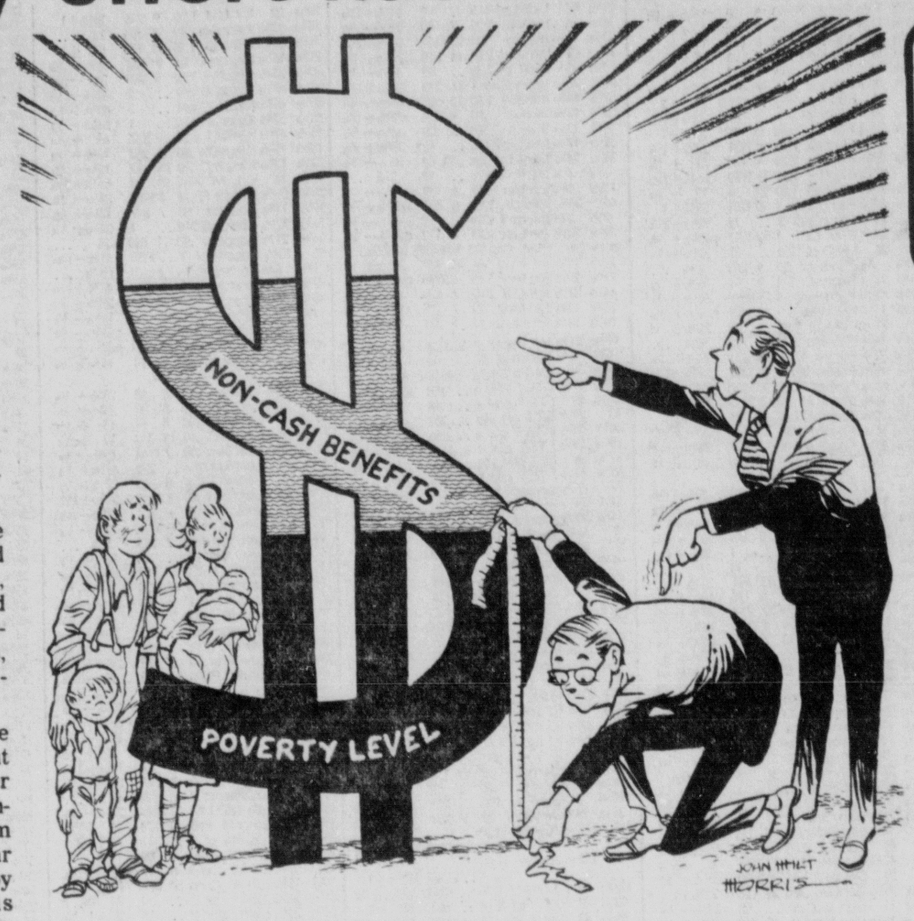
To count them, Korbel adjusted the numbers and found:

—If there were no government welfare programs, 43.4 million people would be considered poor — 20 per cent of the population.

—When social insurance programs, such as Social Security and unemployment insurance, are figured in, the number of poor falls to 26.6 million, or 12 per cent.

—Adding cash assistance, the number drops to 21.1 million, or 10 per cent. These are the poor under the government's basic poverty definition used by the Census Bureau. Korbel's figure is lower than the Census Bureau's count of 26 million since he adjusted the data to account for under-reporting of income.

—Counting in-kind benefits including Medicaid and Medicare, the number of poor falls to 11.4 million, or about 5 per cent.



"Since 1965 the per cent of families in poverty has been reduced by roughly 60 per cent using this concept, in contrast to the more modest reduction — about 30 per cent — when the Census income concept is employed," Korbel wrote.

An assessment of the war on poverty, then, rests on definitions.

Changing the definition of income, as Korbel did, reduces the number of poor. Other proposed changes in the poverty threshholds would raise the number.

The Census Bureau poverty line, based on money income only, was designed in 1963 by Mollie Orshansky, an economist in the Social Security administration, as a research tool. It was adopted as the official government yardstick in 1969. Many agencies use it to administer programs, although some have shifted to modifications or totally different definitions.

The Orshansky definition sets up 124 poverty lines that vary with family size, sex of the family leader and place of residence. For instance, a fourmember, non-farm family headed by a male was considered poor if its income last year fell below about $5,674. Levels are adjusted each year as consumer prices rise.

A survey of New York City welfare families by the Rand Corp. found that in-kind benefits provide 37 per cent of the total income of families in the Aid for Families with Dependent Children program.

"The AFDC and related inkind income transfer programs ... have achieved one of their main objectives — providing most welfare families with sufficient cash, goods and services to move them from poverty level incomes into a level that is adequate, by conventional standards, for meeting minimal household requirements for food, shelter, health and work-related services," the study concluded.

There are problems with the Congressional Budget Office and Rand observations, howeve. For one, they show that the poor haven't found the means to support themselves at an adequate level and must still lean on the government.

Second, what value should be assigned to in-kind benefits? If a family gets $6,000 worth of medical care for a sick child, its income would appear to be at least $6,000 — much better than its actual condition. Of all in-kind benefits, medical care causes the most difficulty in assigning an income value.

Third, there is evidence that the poverty threshholds are too low. Miss Orshansky computed them by taking the cost of the Agriculture Department's low-cost food plan and multiplying by three. A 1955 survey showed that families typically spent one-third of their income for food.

Surveys since then suggest that the multiplier should be 3.4 or higher. Nutritional standards have changed, too. "Using a modernized, simplified poverty line does result in a higher number of poor," Miss Orshansky says.

She contends that if in-kind benefits for the poor are counted as income, so should noncash income of the non-poor, such as tax breaks for home buyers and employer-paid medical insurance. Doing this probably would raise the multiplier, and thus the poverty threshhold and the number of poor.

Sorting all of this out is up to Congress, where the going is slow.

Miss Orshansky has updated and revised her poverty threshholds, and others have suggested new measurements, but none has been adopted.

"It takes a long time to design a new measure," says Sar Levitan, an economics professor at George Washington University and close observer of the poverty debate. "It takes a long time for an agency to change its rules.

"I imagine there will be a change in the next few years, but obviously it's not a burning issue now.

"If you have new numbers, that has political implications. While the technicians may be talking about it, billions of dollars are riding on those definitions. If you change the definition, some states or cities are going to benefit more than others."

Lockheed quarterly earnings up more than $1 million

BURBANK — (BW) — Lockheed Aircraft Corp. has announced net earnings of $12.1 million for the three months ended March 27, compared with $10.9 million in the first quarter of 1976.

Earnings applicable to common stock were $10.7 million for the quarter. Primary earnings per share of common for the first quarter of 1977 were 81 cents as compared with 92 cents per share in the comparable period of 1976.

Fully diluted earnings per share were 74 cents for the 1977 quarter, compared with 83 cents a year earlier. Earnings per share in 1977 reflect the dilutive effect of warrants to issue shares of common stock to the lending banks in connection with the October 1976 financial restructuring.

Earnings continue to reflect the amortization of L-1011 TriStar commercial transport initial planning and tooling and production start-up costs and the write-off of L-1011 standby production costs due to reduced production levels. A loss of $28.8 million was recorded on the TriStar program during the first three months of 1977 compared with $24.4 million in the 1976 quarter.

Earnings for the quarter were affected favorably by a lower provision for income tax compared with the 1976 quarter.

Excluding the L-1011 transport, program profits before other income, interest and income taxes increased to $63.9 million for the 1977 quarter, compared with $62.4 million for the like period last year.

Earnings and the impact of the 1976 financial restructuring increased shareholders' equity to $177.5 million from $86.2 million at the end of the first quarter of 1976.

Sales for the initial three months of 1977 were $833 million as compared to $863 million in the first quarter of 1976. Largest decreases occurred in the L-1011 TriStar jetliner, C-130 Hercules transport, and S-3A Viking antisubmarine aircraft programs. These decreases were partially offset by higher ship construction and JetStar business jet sales.

Sales mix for the first quarter comprised $565 million or 68 per cent to the U.S. government, $42 million or 5 per cent to domestic commercial customers, and $226 million or 27 per cent to foreign customers, including sales to foreign governments, commercial customers, and those made through the U.S. government.

Aircraft and related products and services constituted 54 per cent of first quarter sales, with missiles, spacecraft, and electronics accounting for 36 per cent and shipbuilding and others 10 per cent.

Signups of new and follow-on orders totaled $543 million, a slight increase over the $532 million reported in the first quarter of 1976. Approximately 69 per cent were U.S. government orders, 19 per cent from foreign governments, and 12 per cent from commercial customers.

Funded backlog at March 27 was $4.1 billion, compared with $3.9 billion at March 28, 1976. Approximately 41 per cent of the March 1977 backlog was U.S. government orders, with 40 per cent commercial and 19 per cent from foreign governments, and 12 per cent from commercial customers. In addition to funded amounts of U.S. and foreign government contracts, backlog contains unfilled TriStar and other commercial orders, including $943 million in TriStar second-buy orders having minimal down payments. Not included are negotiated but unfunded amounts totaling $1.8 billion on U.S. and foreign government programs.

TriStar March backlog included 23 firm orders and 45 second-buy orders. The firm orders include three aircraft of All Nippon Airways that had been listed as conditional firm orders until last month, when ANA received final Japanese government approval. Delivery of the three aircraft will take place in 1978.

Two L-1011's were delivered during the quarter, down from six in the comparable 1976 period, bringing the cumulative total to 140. Eight additional deliveries are scheduled before yearend.

Long-term debt, excluding the current portion, was $552 million at the quarter, compared with $810 million a year earlier and $561 million at yearend.

Wells named to new post in L.A. area

H. GORDAN WELLS

H. Gordan Wells, vice president and manager of the downtown Pomona branch of the Bank of America, is being transferred to a new post with the bank's regional headquarters in Los Angeles.

Wells, who has managed the downtown Pomona branch for the past 11 years, will assume new duties as vice president and credit administrator for 17 branches at Bank of America's Southern California headquarters.

The transfer is effective this month.

Wells has been with Bank of America for more than 30 years. Prior to coming to the Pomona branch he worked at branches in Los Angeles, San Dimas and San Gabriel.

Born in Glendale, Wells graduated from Covina High School and received an economics degree from USC and did graduate work at Stanford University.

He is a member of the board of directors of the Pomona Chamber of Commerce and serves on a number of the chamber's advisory committees.

Wells has been active in a variety of community affairs and organizations, including the Salvation Army and United Crusade.

He and his wife, Virginia, reside in West Covina. They have three sons.

Seattle Slew wins despite bad start

LOUISVILLE, Ky. (AP) — "It's the greatest show on earth," Karen Taylor said of the Kentucky Derby after her beloved Seattle Slew overcame a stumbling start Saturday to become the star performer.

And the dark bay colt always has finished first.

Saturday it was by 1¾ lengths over late-charging Run Dusty Run.

"He fell all over the place at the break," said jockey Jean Cruguet. "He didn't break too fast. It was pretty tight going up between horses after the break, but when you have a lot of horse and speed enough, it's easy."

"He rode a very, very cool race. That's the way you win the Derby," Turner said of Cruguet, who has been criticized by some trainers and in the media for his handling of Seattle Slew, even though the Slew has never lost under the Frenchman's riding.

For a time on the backstretch, it looked as if the Slew wasn't going to fire. Turner, watching a rerun on the race in the Churchill Downs press box, commented. "Right here I thought that he was going nowhere. He just wasn't running."

Turner still seemed flustered long after the race. He had been unable to get back to his box and had to watch it on a television set—and for part of the 1¼ miles he watched the wrong horse. "I thought he was fourth," said Turner, when actually the Slew never was worse than second.

"I hit him to get him going turning for home," said Cruguet.

Seattle Slew was four lengths back of For The Moment with a half-mile left. He began a drive on the turn and at the quarter pole he was a head in front of For The Moment.

"I hit him just with the flat part of the stick and not hard— and he responded," said Cruguet.

At the top of the stretch, Seattle Slew put away For The Moment, drew out to a three-length lead, then held off Run Dusty Run, who finished second by a neck over Sanhedrin.

Jorge Velasquez, who rode Sanhedrin, filed a foul claim, contending his mount was intimidated in the stretch by Run Dusty Run, ridden by Darrel McHargue. There never has been a foul claim upheld in a Derby. This was no exception.

"He was getting to Seattle Slew every jump," said Smiley Adams, trainer of Run Dusty Run. "Everyone has said how easy Seattle Slew could run— but that boy (Run Dusty Run) tore him up."

But he didn't beat him.

"I guarantee he'll win next time," said Cruguet. Next time probably will be the Preakness at Pimlico in Baltimore in two weeks.

Seattle Slew negotiated the 1¼ miles on a track labeled fast in a relatively slow 2:02 1/5.

But Mickey Taylor, Karen's husband, said the slow time didn't matter. "Two nineteen is okay as long as we win," he said.

Seattle Slew, the sixth unbeaten favorite to run in the Derby and only the second to win—Majestic was the other in 1969—paid $3, $2.80 and $2.80.

Run Dusty Run paid $3.40 and $3.20 and Sanhedrin paid $4.60. Get the Axe, who gave Willie Shoemaker his 20th Derby ride, was fourth.

After the race, Karen Taylor was happy but visibly shaken. But before the race it was Seattle Slew who had a case of nerves. He was sweating heavily in the post parade and was nervous in the paddock.

"It was the most nervous he's been in the post parade," said Turner. "He's always nervous in the paddock," added Cruguet. "He settled nicely in the gate but then he just didn't break."

Seattle Slew was in close quarters through the first quarter-mile before he forced his way through, moving Flag Officer and Affiliate out. He then ran second to For The Moment until he took the lead at the top of the stretch.

"I guess if he runs long enough he might get beat, but he's a great one," said Cruguet.

But he still apparently has to prove himself in some quarters.

Seattle Slew was "impressive but not awesome," said Lou Rondinello, trainer of Sanhedrin who finished third by 3¾ lengths over Get the Axe. Then came Steve's Friend, Papelote, Giboulee, For The Moment, Affiliate, Flag Officer, Bob's Dusty, Sir Sir, Nostalgia, Western Wind and Best Person.

The next challenge to Seattle Slew's bid for a Triple Crown would be May 21 in the 1 3-16mile P akness. The Triple Crown finale is the 1½-mile Belmont Stakes June 11.

"It wasn't easy," Karen Taylor said.

HOME RUN TROT

La Verne College's Dave Nash rounds third after belting a grand slam home run in Saturday's La Verne-UN Las Vegas twinbill. Nash had two of the Leopards' 11 home runs in the doubleheader as the Leos downed the Rebels by scores of 18-6 and 12-5.

Dodgers lose in 13

By DON BRADLEY
PB Staff Writer

LOS ANGELES — Luck ran out on the Dodgers Saturday night.

Presented with four gift runs in the first inning by Phils' starter Wayne Twitchell, the Dodgers couldn't put enough of the 11 hits they got the rest of the way together to score again and finally succumbed, 7-4, in 13 innings.

The loss snapped a five-game winning streak and ended the chance of tying or beating the mark of the 1955 club that started out 25-4. However, the Dodgers remained 10½ games ahead of the Cincinnati Reds who also lost.

It wasn't that the Angelenos didn't get another chance. They had several in the last few innings. All told, they left eight runners stranded in the last four innings and failed to take advantage of six hits, three walks and a Philadelphia error.

They came about as close as they could in the 11th and 12th.

In the 11th, Steve Yeager, who had three hits including a double and batted in the first two runs, got a one-out single. Pinch-hitter Manny Mota walked and Lee Lacy lined a single to centerfield.

Garry Maddox of the Phils came up firing and pegged a strike to catcher Bob Boone. Bill Russell, who was the next hitter, was signaling Yeager to slide. But Yeager, who loves the contact, barrelled into Boone and sent him flying.

But the Phillies' catcher held onto the ball and Yeager was out at the plate. Russell then flied out to end the inning.

Yeager also figured in the 12th-inning threat. Of course he may not have scored in the 11th even if he had slid and he certainly couldn't help the bad luck that prevailed in the 12th.

Ron Cey drew a one-out walk. Steve Garvey fouled out for the second out. But Rick Monday singled and Dusty Baker walked to load the bases.

The Phils won it in the 13th as Al Downing, fourth Dodger pitcher, gave up a leadoff walk to Jay Johnstone, a one-out RBI single to Larry Bowa and a two-run homer to Mike Schmidt. It was Schmidt's only hit and he carried a .225 average going into the contest.

The Dodgers can't feel too bad although they did pass up a gift victory. The game really should have been a 4-0 Philly win in nine innings.

Twitchell walked four Dodgers in the first inning. The bases on balls combined with Bowa's error on Russell's possible doubleplay ball and Yeager's single, helped the Angelenos score four unearned runs.

Philadelphia pecked away at starter Doug Rau. The visitors scored a run in the second on Jerry Martin's double and Boone's single.

They added another in the seventh when Rau gave up leadoff singles to Boone and Ted Sizemore. That was all for Rau. Charlie Hough got out of the inning with only a single run scoring.

But Hough had problems of his own in the eighth. He hit Martin, gave up a single to Boone and walked Johnstone to load the bases.

Maddox' single drove in the tying runs.

DODGER DATA — Today is Autograph Day with booths open from noon to 12:30 p.m. Burt Hooton (3-1) takes on Steve Carlton (3-1) in the series' finale with also winds up the home stand.

The loss was only the Dodgers' second at home as they conclude a homestand that has seen them win seven of nine games.

The attendance of 38,910 brought the season mark to 548,816.

Although they didn't turn any double plays, the Dodgers have 28 in 27 games so far.

Rick Monday is sponsoring a series of tryout camps throughout the U.S. and foreign countries with his own funds. When Rick signed his Dodger contract, he asked that a portion of the salary be used by the club in the area of player developement.

"I want to give back something to the game which has given me so much," said Mr. Red, White and Blue.

Crenshaw turns around his game

DALLAS (AP) — Ben Crenshaw, always around the lead but greatly dissatisfied with the state of his game, may have turned it all around on the 18th hole of Saturday's third round of the $200,000 Byron Nelson Golf Classic.

He hit his two best shots of the tournament, a 312-yard drive and a sand wedge approach that missed by less than two feet of finding the cup for an eagle two. He tapped in for the birdie he had to have—well after the national television cameras had cut away for the day—and remained in a tie for the lead with Ray Floyd.

"Those two shots on 18 gave me a lot of confidence," said Crenshaw, at 25 one of the brightest of the game's young stars and a great gallery favorite in his native Texas.

"I'm in a good frame of mind going into the last round—the best I've been in all week."

Crenshaw had to perform his usual heroics around the green—dropping a 15-foot putt for bogey on the fifth and holing a 45-50 footer to save par on the 11th—before birdies on three of his last four holes again put him in a tie for the lead.

Floyd also birdied the 18th, also after the television coverage had ended, and led alone until Ben's final birdie.

They led the field by three strokes but more than a dozen players were within five strokes.

"We've got to be careful not to start playing each other tomorrow or somebody else is liable to catch us," Floyd said.

Crenshaw, erratic in the mild, hazy weather, started the day in a four-way tie for the lead, once dropped three strokes off the pace, then birdied the 15th and 16th to catch up again.

But after the television coverage had ended, he fell behind once again when Floyd dropped a 15-foot birdie putt on the last hole.

Lyn Lott, who led or shared the lead through the first two rounds, could do no better than match par 71 and dropped three strokes off the pace at 210.

Home runs pace Leopards

By JIM McCONNELL
PB Staff Writer

La Verne College finished its regular season with a real flourish Saturday, powering no less than 11 home runs in a doubleheader sweep of visiting University of Nevada at Las Vegas.

The Leopards bombed eight round-trippers in taking the seven-inning first game 18-6 and clouted three more in a 12-5 nightcap win. That second game was halted after four and one-half innings due to rain.

Thus, La Verne's "wrecking crew" finished with 11 HR's in only 10 innings of batwork in the twinbill. Leo batters seemed to spend most of the evening using the Arrow Warehouse beyond the leftfield fence and the Rancho Cafe in back of the rightfield barrier for target practice.

A little "target practice" by the Las Vegas hurlers on La Verne batters also inspired the locals. Several Leopards had to bite the dust as Rebel hurlers tried intimidation tactics, but even that did nothing to stop the red-hot Leo bats.

"We really hit that ball tonight," said Leo coach Ben Hines in a massive understatement. "This is the way we have been hitting the past two weeks and I just hope it will continue in the playoffs.

"I think their pitchers learned not to throw at our guys, if anything it got us going all the more."

Oddly enough, Las Vegas had the lead in both games in the early going. In game one a grand slammer by Bob Yount and a solo shot by Mike Guerra gave the Rebels a 5-0 first inning advantage, while they also led in game two 1-0 after one and one-half innings.

However, it was a night on which the streaking Leos (10 wins in a row and a 32-9 final regular-season mark) were not to be denied at the plate.

Dave Nash tied things in a hurry in the last of the first of the opener, slugging a grand slam homer of his own. Pat Proulx's round-tripper in the second put L.V. on top 6-5, and Ralph Valadez made it 7-5 with a leadoff homer in the third.

But the Leos were just beginning their home run barrage. A walk to Steve Polan in the same inning brought up Nash once again, and once again he drove the ball out for a 9-5 Leo advantage.

Three more L.V. runs came across in the fifth, and homers by Polan, reserve first baseman Mike Embery, Rick Oliver and Dave Chavez in the sixth ended the Leo scoring.

Seaver apologizes for blasting owner

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — New York Mets pitching ace Tom Seaver apologized Saturday for blasting board chairman M.Donald Grant's reported "must win" edict regarding the team's upcoming annual exhibition game against the New York Yankees.

"I owe M.Donald Grant an apology because of a misunderstanding," Seaver told a news conference several hours before Saturday's game against the San Francisco Giants.

The pitcher had been quoted in The New York Daily News as saying: "The man (Grant) is a maniac. The man is imageconscious, that's all. I never wanted to leave this organization. Never. But the time is now.

"Can you imagine, here we are in our worst slump of the season and all he's worrying about is an exhibition game that doesn't mean a damn thing."

There was no official edict from Grant, but it was generally known by the players that he had ordered Manager Joe Frazier to go all-out to win Monday night's annual charity game with the Yankees.

Seaver told Saturday's news conference that he was not misquoted, but said: "There was a time difference between the time I thought he said what he said and the time he actually said it."

Grant made his remarks to Frazier last Tuesday after the Mets had lost to the Los Angeles Dodgers the previous night. The last-place Mets' losing streak stood at five games following Friday night's loss to the Giants.

"I talked to Mr. Grant on the phone and we got things straightened out," Seaver said."

Foreman give mom a present--quits ring

HOUSTON (AP) — Former world heavyweight boxing champion George Foreman said Saturday he is retiring from the ring because of his religious beliefs and his love for his mother.

"Because of my religious beliefs, I believe it wrong to hit and beat up on another person even if it is a sport," Foreman told radio station KYOK.

Foreman said "it all started in Houston as a street fighter and that's where it's going to end."

"I've been lucky in the past not to have killed anyone in the ring and I thank God that I never hurt anyone seriously while I was boxing," he said.

Foreman said he had not decided what he would do in the future except that he would be engaged in religious activities.

"My mother never really wanted me to fight," said Foreman, who was born in Marshall, Tex., where he now makes his home, but was raised in Houston.

"She was always worried and nervous when I was in the ring, about my losing or getting hurt," he said. "And thanks to God, she will not have to worry about it any more because I'm not fighting any more."

Foreman, 28, won 46 bouts and suffered two losses—to Muhammad Ali and Jimmy Young in his last fight this year.

Foreman won the crown Jan. 22, 1972, in Kingston, Jamaica by knocking out Joe Frazier. He lost the title to Ali in October 1974 in Zaire.

He won a gold medal in the Olympics in Mexico City in 1968 and won fame for waving a tiny American flag in the ring at a time other when some other black American medal winners made defiant gestures during the awards ceremonies.

Rookie's first shutout beats Angels, Tanana

BOSTON (AP) — Rookie Bob Stanley posted his first major league shutout by outdueling southpaw Frank Tanana with a six-hitter Saturday in the Boston Red Sox' 3-0 victory over the California Angels.

Stanley, 2-0, a 22-year-old right-hander, struck out only three, but frustrated the Angels with his hard sinkerball, forcing them to continually pound the ball into the ground.

Tanana, who had won four in a row, allowed seven hits in taking his first loss. He struck out eight and walked two. He retired the first 11 batters in order before Jim Rice walked on a 3-2 pitch and George Scott drilled a triple to center with two out in the fourth.

Doubles by Dwight Evans and Bobby Darwin scored another run in the sixth and Steve Dillard made it 3-0 with his first homer of the season.

Stanley, who needed only 104 pitches in his first complete game for the Red Sox, got 19 putouts on groundballs, including two double plays. Shortstop Rick Burleson was the busiest Boston infielder with 11 assists and two putouts.

Only two California runners advanced as far as third base.

In the seventh, Bobby Bonds got an opposite-field double when his slicing drive bounced into the right field stands and took third on a single by Dave Chalk. However, Stanley ended the threat by getting Bruce Bochte to ground into an inning-ending double play.

With one out in the eighth, Bob Jones popped a pinch single to right center and Bobby Grich followed with a line single to right. Jerry Remy grounded out weakly to first. Then, with runners on second and third, Stanley struck out Don Baylor. Stanley then breezed through the ninth.

Chalk had three of California's six hits. The others were by Bonds' Jones and Grich. Dillard and Rice had two hits apiece for the Red Sox.

Tanana worked out of a big jam in the sixth. Dillard and Rice singled before Scott and Carlton Fisk popped out. Evans walked; but Tanana put down the threat by getting Butch Hobson on a foul pop.

Scott wins Fresno mile

Scott, who ran 3:55.1 last week at the Penn Relays, failed to break the 11-year-old meet record of 3:59.1.

Wind and cold hampered the contestants at the Golden Anniversary running of the West Coast Relays, but Greg Foster of UCLA ran the fastest electronically timed 120-yard high hurdles this year, edging Dedy Cooper of San Jose State in 13:54 seconds.

Luc Lapperriere of Palomar College set a meet mark in the junior college javelin with a toss of 267-10, just six feet short of the national JC record.

Close call alters Yeager's outlook

LOS ANGELES (AP) — On a cool evening in San Diego nine months ago, death missed Steve Yeager by a fraction of an inch. The Dodger catcher said the close call has changed his approach to life.

"I suddenly realized that just because I'm here today doesn't mean I'm going to be here tomorrow," Yeager said. "My attitude about a lot of things changed; I don't go hell-bent for leather all the time like I used to."

Yeager, off to his best start ever for the high-flying Dodgers this season, was injured last Sept. 6 in one of the most unusual accidents in major league baseball history.

Kneeling in the on-deck circle in San Diego, Yeager was struck in the throat by the barrel of the broken bat of Los Angeles teammate Bill Russell.

Nine splinters lodged in Yeager's neck, barely missing his windpipe, a major artery and the area that controls nerve muscles in the arm.

"Doctors said afterward that I was lucky to be alive," Yeager recalled. "The doctor who operated on me to remove the splinters, all from a half-inch to three-quarters of inch long, said a difference in location of any of them by a quarter of an inch or so could have killed me."

Yeager suffered some temporary loss of feeling in his right thumb and forefinger because of nerve damage, but the injury has had no effect on him this year. In fact, Yeager, a fine defensive catcher with a .239 lifetime batting average, is currently hitting around .360.

"My attitude about things is just not the same as it was before that accident," he said. "For instance, I played hurt earlier last season, and it didn't help me or the team.

"This year, I was sick with a cold for a few days, and I told Tommy Lasorda (Dodger manager) not to play me. I'm just not speeding through life like I was before; I'm taking it easy and noticing things more, enjoying things more."

Yeager, 28, who is now in his sixth year with Los Angeles, said that strangely, he was not frightened when the accident happened last fall.

"I wasn't really scared until the next day," he said. "But when the doctor explained to me what had happened and told me he was going to have to make an incision in my neck three inches deep and four inches across to remove the splinters, I was scared."

Yeager said that on the day following the operation, he awoke to a moving scene.

"My wife, Gloria, was asleep on the floor next to my bed, and it was evident she had been lying there all night crying. I know it was a nightmare for her," Yeager said, "and she was super to me through it all."

Yeager said he learned one other thing from the accident: "Despite what most people think, baseball's a dangerous game."

El Toro wins Claremont meet

El Toro High School placed first in the 1977 Claremont Invitational girls' track and field meet Saturday at Pomona College's field.

El Toro wound up with 58 points. Westchester came in just four points behind.

Of the local teams competing, Claremont's Wolfpack had the most points with 29. The 'Pack's Kristin Sorrensen was outstanding in the grueling pentathlon finishing second with a total of 3248 points.

Sorrensen was second in both the long jump (5.28 meters) and the high jump (1.60 meters). She also came up with a third place finish in the 800 meters (2:26.4).

Rich Ede, meet director and Claremont's girls' track coach, said about Kristin, "She did a very good job today. She had problems with the hurdles, but like a good pentathlete, she forgot about that race and came back and did well in the other events."

Two girls had an outstanding day and they were named Co-Athletes of the Meet. Carol Dolsby of Monte Vista High in Danville set a meet record in the discus with her brilliant toss of 35.42 meters (116'2"). She placed second in the shot put with a heave of 12.08 meters (39'7").

The other winner was Gwen Gardner of Crenshaw who burned the track with a meet record of 24.7 in the 200-meter dash. Gardner's time of 57.4 in the 400 meters broke the old meet mark, but she placed second to Roxanne Jackson (57.0).

In the high jump, Kari Gosswiller of Upland leaped over the bar at 1.69 meters (5'6½").

Garey won third place honors in the 880-yard medley relay with a time of 1:55.0. Veronica Bell, Saundra Fitz, Helen Williams, and Theresa Lofton made up that relay squad.

The meet was run quite efficiently by Ede & Co. and the Claremont Kiwanis. There were 38 teams participating with over 1100 event entries from throughout the state of California.

Janet Guthrie turns fastest practice lap

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Janet Guthrie, whose bid to become the first woman driver in the Indianapolis 500 ended in defeat and frustration a year ago, turned the fastest lap Saturday as practice began for the May 29 race.

Miss Guthrie, whose Vollstedt racer never got above 177 miles per hour last year, was clocked at 185.605 in a Lightning-Offenhauser recently purchased from the Lindsey Hopkins Team. The car was driven last fall in tire tests here by Roger McCluskey at more than 198 m.p.h.

"I went out and there was a slight problem with the suspension," Miss Guthrie said. "But we came in and made a few adjustments and it was like a whole new animal."

Another minor problem developed shortly after she hit a lap at 181.415 when a hose became disconnected between the gearbox and the engine, but it was quickly repaired and she went back out for more practice and turned in the fastest lap of the day.

The 39-year-old brunette from New York wouldn't predict how fast her car will go. "Fast enough," was all she would say.

Miss Guthrie did not make a qualification attempt last year. A series of blown engines, broken oil lines and burned pistons kept her car in the garage much of the time, and when she finally got the racer onto the track it simply wasn't fast enough.

Miss Guthrie's fast lap and one by rookie Danny Ongais at 182.927 shortly before the track closed eclipsed the day's previous best of 182.815 by Wally Dallenbach, the U.S. Auto Club points leader after last week's victory at Trenton. Dallenbach, shooting for his 11th Indy start, was among a handful of drivers as practice began at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway under cloudy skies and wound up in steaming sunshine.

The 180-m.p.h. limit was lifted by USAC less than three hours after the track opened, and within minutes Dallenbach was up to his 182-plus clocking. He qualified seventh last year at 184.445 and was running fourth when the race was halted by rain.

By the end of the day's practice, 11 cars had made their initial runs and four others had passed USAC technical inspection.

Olivero and teammate Bill Vukovich were the first drivers on the track after early-morning rain and opening-day ceremonies delayed the scheduled start of pactice by 46 minutes. Others were veteran Jerry Grant, Larry Dickson, Steve Krisiloff and rookie Jerry Sneva.

'Hen tracksters place second

REDLANDS — Pomona-Pitzer came up with a fine team showing to place second in both the men's and women's divisions in the SCIAC track championships at the University of Redlands Saturday.

The Sagehens' 69 points in the men's was second to Occidental who ran away with the title with 109 points. Claremont-Mudd finished third with 44 points and La Verne took seven points on the day.

Host Redlands won the women's division with 125 points followed by Pomona-Pitzer with 54 and Scripps College-Harvey Mudd was third with 19.

Pomona-Pitzer's John Armstrong set new school records in winning the 1500 meters and placing third in the 800 meters.

Armstrong raced to a 3:50.6 in the 1500 and a 1:52.3 in the 800 to lead the Hens.

P-P's John Kittleson won the 5000-meter run with a 14:58.8 time and Bob Menicucci took the shot put at 48-feet, four inches. La Verne's only place was second in the shot by Dana Lanier (47-9¾).

The Sagehen 1600-meter relay team of Mark Johnson, Mark Reynolds, Jeff Signer, and Bill Taylor copped first place with a 3:27.1 time ahead of Claremont-Mudd.

C-M's Art Pinkney won the 400 in 49.6 ahead of Taylor who was also clocked in 49.6.

Jenny Stary was the only Sagehen woman to take a first place, winning the long jump and the discus.

The former Claremont High trackster jumped 17-0¾ in the long jump and heaved the discus 115-4.

The Pomona 1600 relay team took second anchored by Stary in 4:29.4. Stary also anchored the 400 relay to a third place.

Carner takes Lady Tara lead

ROSWELL, Ga. (AP) — Joanne Carner, the defending champion, fired a four-underpar 69 Saturday and moved into a tie with Hollis Stacy for the lead in the $50,000 Lady Tara golf tournament.

Stacy, the first-day leader with a 69, fired a steady 70 over the 6,197-yard, par 73 Brookfield West Country Club course to equal Miss Carner's total of 139 going into Sunday's final round.

One shot back was Pat Bradley, who had a 68 in the round that was twice delayed by rain for a total of 80 minutes.

Deadlocked in fourth place at 142 were Sandra Post, who shot a 70 Saturday, and Jan Stephenson, who carded a 71.

Kathy Ahern, who shared the opening round lead, had a 74 and was tied with four others at 143, including Mardell Wilkins, who set a course record for women with a brilliant 67.

Janet Coles, another of the first-day leaders, skied to a 78 and fell well back in the pack at 147.

Others in the 143 group were Gerda Boykin, who shot a 69, and Patty Hayes and Kathy Postlewait, each with 72s. Betsy Cullen was another stroke back at 144 after firing a 74.

Miss Carner, winner of 16 tour victories during her career, played a scrambling round, knocking in short birdie putts on three holes and an 18footer at No. 4.

Her birdie at 17 came despite a series of poor shots. She pulled her drive and hit a tree, then bladed a seven iron shot off a cart path, cut another seven iron and yanked it to the edge of the green, but got a break when the ball kicked to within one foot of the hole for a tap-in birdie.

"In 20 years of amateur and eight years of pro, I've never successfully defended a title," Miss Carner said. "It keeps me grinding."

Miss Stacy had only one bogie, three-putting from 30 feet, and came back with four birdies, all on short-range putts inside 10 feet.

Ways to 'really help' your fellow man

By PHIL ROCHE
PB Staff Writer

May and June are tournament months, lazy, windless days when the tournament schedule is completely filled. Thus, it seems appropriate to review the Roche rules for encouraging your opponent to do "just a little better" if you know what I mean (you can't see my eye winking). Ya know, when he's smashing the ball, pitching up close, and knocking in putts from all corners.

Follow these rules and I guarantee that you'll "help him."

1. Keep reminding him of how well he's doing. "Boy you've got three pars in a row . . . keep it up, Sam."
2. Tell him he's one-putted the last four greens and you're hoping he can one-putt the next one.
3. Let him know you're pulling for him by reminding him of the out of bounds left, the trees right, the traps in the center, and the water in front of the tee.
4. Talk a lot about birdies. "Gee, for a guy like you, this little old 345-yarder is a sure birdie."
5. Compliment him on his driving. "That's the eighth straight hole you've driven down the middle. Don't you ever spray one?"
6. Talk a great deal about the mechanics of the swing. "Well, let's see. You kinda swing from the outside in, like this huh?"
7. Add up his score and announce it loudly to everyone around so that he'll be reminded that he's playing much better than he should.
8. Ask him several times about his handicap. "Are you sure you're a 15? I never saw a 15 play that good before."
9. Let him know how he stands. "Hey, you're only 3 strokes behind the leader. You could win first place money if . . . "
10. At the end of the round when you add up his score, "37-57" tell him how sorry you are that he just couldn't keep his game together for the whole 18.

Then run like blazes because he'll be coming after you with a sandwedge.

It started way back in 1957, and it's been going steadily ever since. For the 20th straight year, the Pomona Chamber of Commerce will hold its annual tournament. This time it will be held Thursday at the El Prado Chino Creek golf course.

Golf gets under way at noon with a shotgun start. Entry fees include golf, cart, prizes and banquet.

I know a host of players who have been around golf courses for scores of years without ever getting a hole in one. But a 16-year-old neophyte from Minnesota reached that goal Thursday the first time he stepped up to the tee.

Bruce Peterson got his short-awaited thrill at the Lodge C.C. in Lodge City, Minn. The Byron High School sent a class to the club so students could play golf for the first time.

Peterson's group started on the 5th hole, which is 132 yards long. He stepped up to the tee, took his first swing ever at a golf ball and watched it roll into the hole — a hole-in-one.

The club championship at Marshall Canyon will be held Saturday and Sunday, May 28-29. Low gross winner at Rancho California recently was Jim Roe with an 83.

Marshall Canyon Men's Club members will travel to Palm Springs next Saturday and Sunday to play Cathedral Canyon and Palm Desert golf courses.

Congratulations are in order to members of Red Hill C.C.'s team in the SCGA club playoffs. The team went to the finals of the SCGA championships before being ousted by Balboa Park.

Red Hill golfers won its division, then won three straight playoff matches with victories over Via Verde, La Canada, and Port Hueneme.

Jack Witham of La Verne won the recent Ruddy Duck tournament with a fine two over par 74 at San Dimas Canyon.

Wayne Elsaesser scored a rare eagle on the long 447 yard, 18th hole using a driver and a 3-wood. Kevin Sullivan, course manager, reports he cannot recall an eagle previously recorded on the hole.

Bonnie Woodrow was low gross winner in the Trophy Tournament at La Mancha recently. Low net honors went to Josie Ochoa in the first flight. Other winners in flights were Debbie Scott, Margaret Mixon, Mae Wellborn and Bernice Connor.

COMING EVENTS La Verne Little League Tournament, Sunday, May 15, San Dimas Canyon; Pomona Chamber of Commerce, Thursday, Chino Creek; Long Driving Contest, Tuesday, Pomona National; Pasadena City, May 19-22, Brookside; Citrus College Tournament, June 6, Corona National; Marshall Canyon Member-Guest, Sunday, June 26; Green River club championship, begins May 27.

AIAW finals set for UCLA track

LOS ANGELES — The nation's premier women's collegiate track & field competitors will converge on the Drake Stadium next month when UCLA hosts the ninth annual AIAW (Association for Intercollegiate Athletics for Women) National Championships, Thursday through Saturday, May 19-21.

This event marks the first time UCLA has had the privilege of hosting an AIAW national collegiate championship, and the first time the AIAW track nationals have been held in Southern California.

Three Southern California teams, Cal State Los Angeles, Cal State Northridge and UCLA, are among the meet favorites. Other strong entries with title hopes include defending champion Prairie View A&M, Seattle Pacific and Iowa State.

The three-day meet will feature 19 different events, with qualifying trials and semifinals on Thursday and Friday, May 19 & 20. The schedule for Saturday, May 21, includes the finals for 12 events plus the conclusion of the pentathlon competition.

All-championship tickets, good for all three days are priced at $5 for adults and $2.50 for students.

All tickets are on sale Monday through Friday at the UCLA Ticket Office in Kerckhoff Hall. For complete ticket information call (213) 825-3275.

Two-inch grass level is best

Grass should be kept at a level of two inches or higher, says the Colorado State University Extension Service, which recommends that a lawn be cut fairly often so that no more than one-third of the grass blade is cut off. Otherwise, the grass blades suffer excessive shock and turn yellow.

Bobick could be hot property

NEW YORK (AP) — Duane Bobick, still needing to prove he's as good as his unbeaten record, and Ken Norton, looking for another shot at the title he thought he won last September, fight Wednesday night.

The bout will be nationall-televised by NBC. The telecast will begin at 6 p.m., and the featured fight will go on between 7:15 and 7:30 p.m.

Other bouts on the card include an unusual 11-round match between light heavyweights Mike Quarry of Tampa, Fla., and Mike Rossman of Turnersville, N.J., and a six-rounder between lightweights Howard Davis Jr. of Glen Cove, N.Y., a 1976 Olympic gold medalist, and Carlos Gonzales of Puerto Rico.

The Bobick-Norton fight originally was scheduled for March 2 but was postponed when Bobick suffered torn rib cartilage while sparring with his brother Rodney.

Bobick, who is managed by former champion Joe Frazier, appears to be in top shape. In a recent sparring session he knocked Obie English down with a left hook under the heart.

"I never really was worried about his physical shape," said trainer Eddie Futch, who once trained Norton. "I was worried about his mental shape. He's mentally ready right now."

NASCAR series

Stock cars invade OMS

NASCAR's Winston West Grand National series for stock cars moves to Ontario Motor Speedway next Sunday when the points chase for this year's coveted championship continues with the second running of the West Coast 250.

Heading the list of points leaders is Bill Schmitt of Redding, who won last Sunday's Winston West opener at Laguna Seca and now leads the standings with 143 points — less than ten ahead of veteran Herchel McGriff of Bridal Veil, Ore.

Schmitt and McGriff were the central figures in the Laguna race where they waged a wheel-to-wheel duel until the final lap when McGriff was forced to make an unscheduled pit stop that dropped him to fourth place.

Both drivers will be in Chevrolets at Ontario, and both are strong favorites to earn up-front starting positions when the 40-car field is determined in qualification runs next Saturday.

McGriff, who will be 50 in December of this year and is sometimes referred to as "Mr. Fountain of Youth" by his racing companions, is still regarded as one of the toughest competitors on the circuit. His almost endless list of victories over the years includes four victories in the Permatex races for NASCAR Sportsman cars at Riverside Raceway.

Trailing Schmitt and McGriff in the current standing is Gary Johnson of Modesto, last year's Winston West rookie of the year who placed third at Laguna and increased his points total to 130 — only four less than McGriff's total. Johnson was an early West Coast 250 entrant and will be at the wheel of a Chevrolet also.

The Ontario race, which is the third of 20 points races making up this year's Winston West Grand National schedule, could also be the turning point for 1976 champion Chuck Bown of Portland, Ore.

Currently, the 23-year old speedster trails in ninth place among the points leaders with 106 points. Bown, who is McGriff's son-in-law, appeared to have victory in his grasp at Laguna last weekend when a burned piston knocked his Chevrolet out of the race.

In the meanwhile, Jimmy Insolo who won the inaugural West Coast 250 at Ontario last April in a thrilling finish, is reported to be close to completing negotiations that will give him a new car for Ontario and most of the Winston West season.

The popular speedster has been without a regular ride since selling the Chevrolet that carried him to victory last year.

Tickets for the West Coast 250 are on sale now at the OMS ticket office and all Ticketron and Liberty outlets including Sears and Wallich Music City stores.

OMS general manager Ray Smartis has announced that general admission tickets, priced at $7 adults and $4 for juniors 16 and under, will include unreserved seating in the Central and East/West Concourse stands.

NBA crowds larger than ever

NEW YORK (AP) — The National Basketball Association enjoyed a record total attendance of 9,898,521 during the regular season just completed, which is not surprising since the league had four more teams than ever before.

"This record attendance demonstrates the continued growth and acceptance of the NBA by fans throughout the 22 league franchise cities," declared Commissioner Larry O'Brien in a statement which went on to describe this as "the most successful year, both on and off the court, in the league's history."

"Attendance figures are for the most part meaningless," he said. "You can sell tickets for a buck and fill the building, but what does it mean? You can't compare the $10 and $12 tickets some teams sell to the discount tickets sold by others."

Scripps College will offer a lecture/demonstration, "Dancer of the New Age: Ruth St. Denis," in Balch Auditorium at 8 p.m. Saturday. Admission is free.

Karoun Tookian, a protege of both St. Denis and her partner-husband, Ted Shawn, will direct the evening's performance. Former head of the faculty and Oriental department of the Ruth St. Denis School, Hollywood, Miss Tookian trained extensively under Miss St. Denis in the performing and teaching of historic dances.

Acclaimed for decades as the First Lady of the Dance, Miss St. Denis danced professionally from 1906 to her death in 1968. A contemporary of Isadora Duncan, St. Denis is known predominantly for the oriental and religious influences of her dances.

The lecture/demonstration will be presented as a part of the Senior Choice Exhibition currently being shown in the Clark Humanities Museum. The exhibition runs through May 20 and is open to the public. Museum hours are 9 a.m. to noon and 1 to 5 p.m., weekdays.

THROUGH THE SPECTRUM — The 15th annual Renaissance Pleasure Faire continues through May 29 at the Old Paramount Ranch near Agoura, Saturdays and Sundays . . . Frederick Remington's bronze, "The Savage," and the bronze "Wolf Dance" by Michael Naranjo, a young American Indian artist who was blinded by a grenade explosion in Vietnam, are on view with 43 paintings from the Western Art Collection of John Hill, on exhibit this month at San Diego Country Estates . . .

ART IN WATERCOLOR — Artist Amy Poll arranges her watercolors in the Lobby Gallery of Pomona First Federal Savings & Loan Association where they will be on exhibition through May.

S & L exhibit

An exhibition of watercolors by Amy Poll is being shown through May in the Lobby Gallery of Pomona First Federal Savings and Loan Association, 399 N. Garey Ave.

Working with watercolors has been a hobby of Mrs. Poll's since she was a child and studied art at a private school in Hungary. She is currently studying under Connie Newton. She is a member of the Pomona Valley Art Association and the Associated Artists. She has displayed her works at La Verne College, Ontario public library, Pomona Valley Community Hospital, and several local banks and savings and loan associations.

In addition to her painting, Mrs. Poll also loves music. She is a member of the Mishpoche Folk Singers of Temple Beth Israel, Pomona. The group, which sings before temple groups and provides entertainment for special occasions, is cutting its first record.

Michael Preble, gallery director at Mt. San Antonio College, has invited the public to be the judge of the 31st annual Student Art Exhibition.

Area residents, students and staff are invited to visit the gallery Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday and make the actual selection of works to be shown May 17 through June 8.

The gallery will be open on Monday and Wednesday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. and on Tuesday from 9 a.m. to 9 p.m. Ballots will be available and must be completed in the gallery.

More than 100 student works will be on display for viewing and voting. The final group of 35 receiving top votes will be mounted for the exhibition. Each student has an opportunity of entering three pieces — drawings, graphics, oils, watercolors — with no size or media limits.

The opening reception for the exhibition will be held from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. May 17. Gallery hours for the remainder of the show will be noon to 4 p.m. Mondays through Thursdays, and 6 to 9 p.m. Tuesdays and Wednesdays.

Oriental art students show

An Oriental brush exhibition featuring the po-mo technique is being held this month at Pomona First Federal Savings & Loan Association, Foothill and Indian Hill boulevards, Claremont.

The artists are from classes sponsored by Claremont Adult Education who meet every Tuesday at Mountain View School. The technique of po-mo is being taught by Claremont artist Ning Yeh. Po-mo (literally "throw ink") was developed about 800 years ago by the Chan School in China. The Yeh family was one of the first to apply the po-mo technique in horse painting. The movement of the stroke and ink is completed in a simple, dynamic manner as if the artist is literally throwing ink.

Many of the artists are members of Pomona Valley Art Association and Associated Artists. Both beginning and advanced students will be showing a vide variety of typically Chinese paintings from bamboo to landscape.

Chino exhibit booked

Works which won awards in the annual Arts and Crafts Show of the Chino Art Association are on exhibition this month at the Chino branch library.

The exhibit includes seascapes, landscapes, still lifes and an unusual portrayal of Christ. Crafts and sculpted items are displayed in a glass case. Many of the award-winning paintings are for sale.

Spring Fling slated

The Associated Artists will hold the Spring Fling, annual juried show, at the Ontario library from 1:30 to 9 p.m. Friday, 10 a.m. to 9 p.m. Saturday, and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. next Sunday. A reception will be held at 7:30 p.m. Friday.

Judges will be watercolorist Ken Decker and artist/instructor Darwin Duncan. Some 300 original works will be entered as well as clay sculpture. Prizes and ribbons will be awarded in many categories. Many works not included in the competition will also be on display.

The Associated Artists, made up of 125 artists and craftsmen from throughout the valley, displays works in hospitals, banks and civic buildings. The group meets at the Ontario library on the second Wednesday of each month.

Axis formed

The Rome-Berlin-Tokyo Axis was formed in 1937.

Earth sized

Covina to hold art fete

The Covina Arts and Crafts Association will hold its first annual spring festival in the Covina Park from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday and next Sunday.

Some 200 craftsmen will be selling pottery, paintings, quilts, woodcrafts, macrame, leather goods and other works.

The festival will offer refreshments, a cake walk, a puppet show and other entertainment. Drawings for prizes will be held every hour.

SINGAPORE (AP) — Three musicians playing their way through the busy dining room of a hotel stopped at a table occupied by four Americans.

"Hey, you're the same trio that sang for us last week in Hong Kong," one tourist exclaimed.

"Sure, we were in Hong Kong last week," the lead guitar acknowledged.

"Where do you come from?"

"The Philippines," said the man with the bass.

"Going to Manila next?"

"No. Next are Kuala Lumpur and then Jakarta."

The tourists had encountered one of the Philippines' remarkable musical exports: strolling players.

Rivals in Singapore, Bangkok and elsewhere in Asia may resent it, but Filipino entertainers are acknowledged masters of this specialty.

Nor are they a recent development based on chains of new hotels and international tourism. Old records indicate that the white Rajahs of colonial Sarawak, now a province of Malaysia, enjoyed "musical selections played by a Filipino band at Sunday concerts."

Old or new, the Musicians Union of Singapore called on the government earlier this year to regulate the entry of foreign music men on a reciprocal basis.

"In this way, local musicians may have more local opportunities for employment and perfecting their musical skill. Then our local musicians may be able to become good enough to perform abroad and win fame and publicity for Singapore," a union statement said.

Through its efforts, the union said, foreign groups can remain here no longer than six months and a local group has to be engaged whenever a foreign group is employed.

Top singer Carman Patena says she and other Filipinos "understand the complaints against us by some local entertainers in the other cities." The demand continues, however.

A top executive at a hotel here said, "Filipinos seem more extroverted, more eager to please than many local entertainers (Singapore is more than 70 per cent Chinese) who may be as technically adept. Also, Filipino groups have been at it a lot longer."

A check in Manila indicated 3,500 to 4,000 singers and musicians are out of the country each year performing as far afield as North and South America, Japan, Iran, Australia and New Zealand.

Eleuterio Gardiner, president of the Philippine Entertainers, Exporters and Promoters Association, says, "Our people are very versatile. That is why they are preferred abroad. They can easily adapt from one style to another and they are easy to get along with."

WE MADE TOYOTA

★ VALUE ★

THE ANSWER, NEW FOR '77

"The Answer" is Toyota's lowest-priced car with the great gas mileage you'd expect from Toyota. "The Answer." It's here today. You asked for it. You got it, Toyota.

'77 CELICA LIFTBACK

The 1977 Celica GT Liftback offers you the practical convenience of the wide-opening rear door and fold-down rear seat. And the thrilling performance of a standard 5-speed overdrive transmission coupled with a powerful 2.2 liter overhead cam engine. Practically too good to believe.

'77 TOYOTA TRUCK

Standard Features: Transistorized ignition, power front disc brakes, flo-thru ventilation, mud guards, electric fuel pump, and more.

LARGE ENOUGH TO SERVE YOU, SMALL ENOUGH TO CARE.

WE'RE LARGER NOW, BUT WE STILL CARE.

CARNIVAL

"SOME DOCTOR SAYS HERE THAT INSANITY IS HEREDITARY . . . PARENTS GET IT FROM THEIR CHILDREN!"

"OUR ACCOUNT BALANCES, HERB! THANK GOODNESS WE'RE STILL LOWER MIDDLE CLASS . . . BUT JUST BARELY!"

"ABOUT THE SUBJECT FOR YOUR SERMON, DEAR, 'THE LORD WILL PROVIDE.' IS THAT WISE . . . WITH THE BUILDING FUND DRIVE ON?"

"WE FOUND THE TROUBLE! YOUR WARRANTY HAS RUN OUT!"

PATTERNS

They Match
These dresses for mother and daughter are two separate patterns. No. 8341 (mother) with Photo-Guide is in Sizes 10-18. Size 12, 34 bust: 3⅜ yards 45-inch. No. 8342 (daughter) is in Sizes 3 to 8 years. Size 4: 1¾ yards 45-inch.

A Classic
Convenient patch pockets and a choice of sleeve lengths make this shirt dress a favorite. No. 8387 with Photo-Guide is in Sizes 10 to 18. Size 10, 32½ bust: 2¼ yards of 60-inch; 2¼ yards braid.

Interesting

Polly's Pointers

DEAR POLLY— I put pieces of left-over wallpaper to good use by cutting bottom liners for waste baskets. When the baskets are emptied none of the trash sticks to the bottom. These liners are pretty and I have cleaner baskets. — BILLIE.

DEAR POLLY — To keep a steel wool soap pad from rusting after using, wrap paper toweling around the pad and place in a soap dish. Rewrap each time it is used. It will stay almost like new. — MARY O'D.

Send your helpful hints to Polly's Pointers in care of this newspaper.

DEAR POLLY — Furniture scratches can be covered up easily and inexpensively with nuts. Take a fresh, unsalted pecan or walnut, break in half and rub the blemished area with the broken nut meat. Watch the color return! — HAZEL.

DEAR POLLY — My Pointer concerns those old dress shirts you don't know what to do with. Being a working gal, I come home and put on one of my husband's old dress shirts to cover and protect my good work clothes while starting supper. This sure helps if you are a sloppy cook, like me. — MARJORIE.

DEAR POLLY — The toothpick holder on our dinette table was constantly being upset, until we discovered that a thin piece of styrofoam placed in the bottom of the holder kept the toothpicks in place after they were stuck into it. — P.M.

DEAR POLLY — I make place cards from the unprinted parts of greeting cards. I do quite a few at a time to have on hand for my own use or to give as gifts. When using them for my own party I have the cards serve as icebreakers by writing each person's name on his card backward. — CAMILLA.

DEAR POLLY — Those plastic holders on soft drink or beer cans can be put together with the wire closures that come on so many things and used to guide plants that need to vine out. This works fine on green beans. — LOIS.

DEAR POLLY — A cotton swab or two work great for cleaning hard-to-get-at places like between the blender buttons, as that is a real squeeze, or in between oven and stove dials, and in corners in the kitchen and bathroom. — MRS. J.D.R.

Handy
Make this handy apron with sunbonnet pockets. No. 2067 has tissue for sizes 38, 40 and 42; full directions.

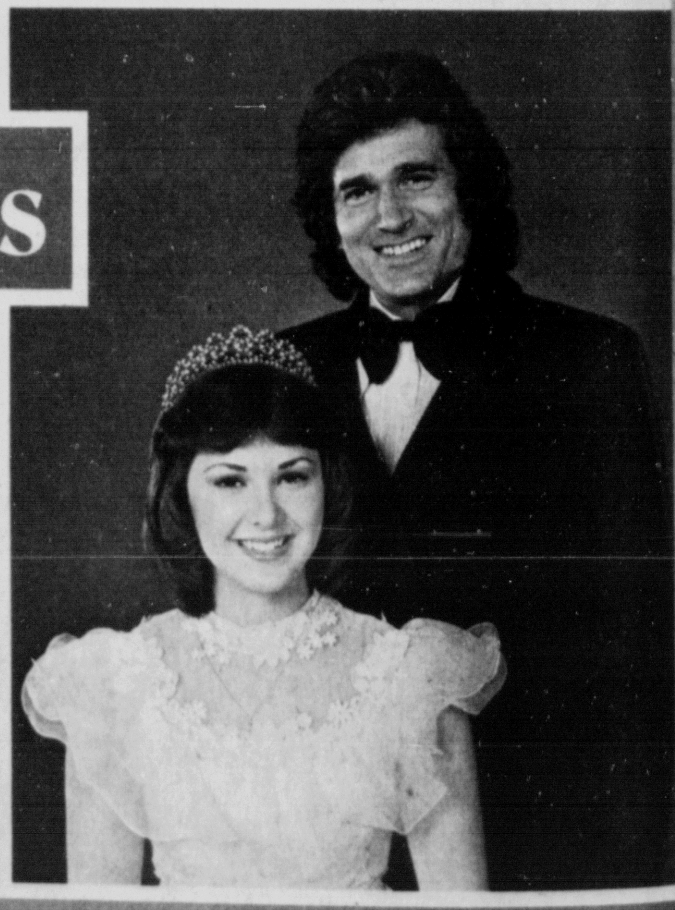
FIRE!

Ernest Borgnine, Alex Cord, Vera Miles, Patty Duke Astin, Donna Mills, Lloyd Nolan, Neville Brand and Ty Hardin star in "Fire!" an NBC World Premiere Movie on the Big Event, Sunday from 9 to 11PM. The drama concerns a convict who sets a series of fires to divert attention from his escape plans, and an entire mountain community rallies to battle the huge and devastating blaze that threatens the town's very existence. The Irwin Allen Production was filmed on location near Portland, Oregon.

Junior Miss



The 20th Annual "America's Junior Miss Pageant," with high school seniors from all 50 states vying for the title, airs as a CBS presentation Monday at 9PM, from Mobile, Alabama, with Michael Landon as host for the fourth consecutive year. Ms. Lenne Jo Hallgren, America's Junior Miss of 1976, will crown the new title-holder. Among the judges for the event are actor Gary Collins; Dr. Leroy Walker, head track coach of last year's Olympics; Linda Rutledge, America's Junior Miss of 1973 and currently a 2nd Lieutenant in the U.S. Marine Corps; Arthur Gordon, executive editor of Guidepost Magazine, and Cleo Paturis, editor of American Girl Magazine.

JUNIOR MISS PAGEANT

At the first Junior Miss finals in 1958, the 18 contestants, committee members and a dozen or so backstage workers outnumbered the very audience at an ancient downtown movie theater in Mobile, Alabama. This year, on Monday at 9PM, America's Junior Miss Pageant will attract some 40 million CBS viewers plus 10,000 in the live audience at Mobile's modern auditorium complex. Outgrowth of a springtime floral festival, the Junior Miss program celebrates its 20th anniversary among the nation's leading scholarship activities for young women. The audience increase is just an indication of the impact Junior Miss has today.

Fifty high school girls of the Class of '77 participate in 10 days of rehearsals and preliminaries leading up to the finale. Prize list is $75,000 in college scholarships and other awards. The new America's Junior Miss will receive a $15,000 scholarship. Scholarships and awards at the local, state and national levels will exceed $1.5 million this year.

More than 25,000 high school girls compete from a total of 300,000 who are contacted, introduced or apply. Local pageants are held in more than 1,000 cities and involve girls from 4,000 communities. State and local programs are organized and conducted by 30,000 volunteers—Jaycees, Jaycettes, Lions, Kiwanis, Exchange, Women's clubs, schools, newspapers, recreation departments and other civic organizations. The judging standard uniform at all levels, and the concern of the people who conduct the program at every level—many of whom are former Junior Misses and their parents, are considered the significant factors in the success of the program.

Junior Misses are judged on the basis of scholastic achievement (15 per cent), physical wellbeing (15), poise and appearance (15), creative and performing arts (20), and an individual judge's interview which considers perception, sense of values, clarity of expression, ability and concern in the area of human relations (35 per cent).

Television star, Michael Landon, who will be master of ceremonies at the finals for the fourth time this year, said in an interview on television last year: "The first year I did it because it was a job; I continue to do it because I like it... I like the people, the program, the girls... They really love one another; the emotions and tears are real. Nationwide, Junior Miss offers many, many girls the chance to continue their education."

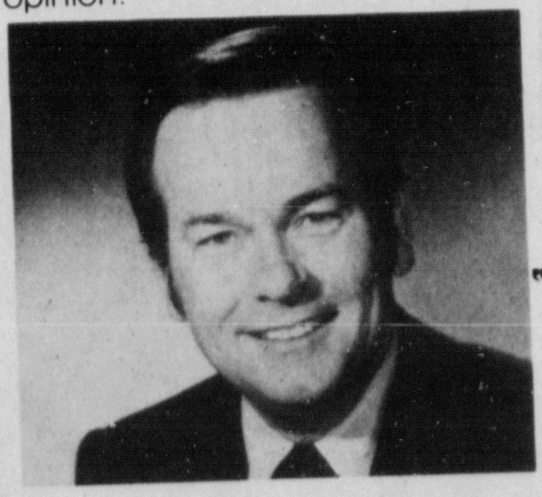
CHANNEL 4

This week Jess Marlow investigates television programming.

Does violence on television really aggravate our aggressive instincts or is television merely a scapegoat for an age-old problem? There are big and heated differences of opinion.



This week Channel 4 will be spending some time talking with the people who create the programs, and to the psychologists who analyze their impact. We'll view film clips from some "violent" episodes and learn that according to certain critics, even some comedies have a "violence quotient."

Probe into the world of television programming with Jess Marlow this week. You may find out whether television is really the villain.

COVER CLOSE-UP

GLAMOUR GIRL

Television's top glamour girl, Farah Fawcett-Majors, not only performs capably on a skateboard, she's also a whiz at tennis and shoots golf in the low 90s, is a "green thumb" gardener—raising her own vegetables and decorative plants, and enjoys water skiing, hunting, fishing and running on the beach.

The flaxen-haired actress co-stars with Kate Jackson and Jaclyn Smith on ABC's Charlie's Angels, Wednesdays at 10PM. From Corpus Christi, Texas, Farrah is the daughter of James Fawcett, an oil field contractor, and his wife, Polly. She has an older sister, Diane. After attending W.B. Ray High School in Corpus Christi, Farrah majored in art at the University of Texas in Austin. She was interested in both abstract painting and realistic sculpture. "Sculpture is the most gratifying thing I have ever done," says the lithe lady. "I am amazed to see what I can create from a piece of clay with my hands and my imagination."

Farrah was picked as one of the "Ten Most Beautiful Girls" while a freshman at the university. When her picture was sent to Hollywood in connection with the event, a publicist saw it and invited her to come to the coast to try for a film career. Farrah came to Hollywood and was signed by Screen Gems where her first film was "Love Is A Funny Thing." She did a series of guest appearances in Screen Gem productions; played the ingenue in "Myra Breckenridge," and has appeared with Lee Majors (her husband) in both Owen Marshall, Counselor at Law and The Six Million $ Man. She has also made over 100 TV commercials for cars, shampoos, makeup, airlines, soft drinks and sun glasses.

Are we being seduced, or simply had? Our love affair with cars is the biggest industry in the nation.

Tonight, and all this week John Hambrick takes you on an intimate tour of our automotive love nest. Romantic old classics that go for $500,000 each. Freaky, far-out cars. The love-poor custom car owner. The Rent-A-Wreck cult. The stunt studs.

Pull over to Channel 7 at 6 P.M. all this week. Better yet, move your TV set to the garage, so your true love can watch, too.

Introducing Vantage 100's.

You may not have known it, but those extra long 100's that so many smokers find popular are usually extra long in tar.

And that means they couldn't be Vantage. Because Vantage was made for smokers who wanted a cigarette that was low in tar and high in flavor.

So we resisted the trend. Until we could perfect a 100 with the famous Vantage combination of full flavor and low tar.

Well, we've done it. In new Vantage 100's. A blend of flavor-rich tobaccos with tar levels held down to the point where good taste still comes through.

That's the Vantage point. And that's the point of Vantage 100's. There's never been a long cigarette quite like it.

Try a pack today. We think you'll go along with us.

Warning: The Surgeon General Has Determined That Cigarette Smoking Is Dangerous to Your Health.

11 mg. "tar", 0.9 mg. nicotine av. per cigarette, by FTC method.

ASK THEM YOURSELF

Send the question, on a postcard, to "Ask," Family Weekly, 641 Lexington Ave., New York, N.Y. 10022. We'll pay $5 for published questions. Sorry, we can't answer others.

FOR DELLA REESE, singer

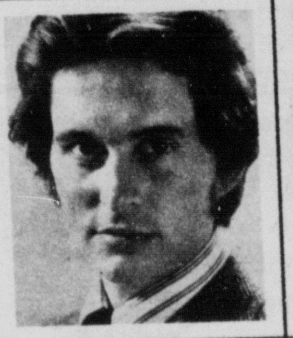
What was the first important lesson you taught your daughter? —Julie Gros Louis, Bloomington, Ind.

● The value of money. When Dumpsey was 11, I put her on a weekly allowance. She started off with a dollar. At 14, she got $3, with a dollar raise the following year. The money I give her is just for extras; the big things, such as school lunches and necessities, I pay for. Dumpsey learned quickly. She doesn't run out of cash because she hoards and saves, and she always has a few loose bills stashed away.

FOR BURT BACHARACH, composer

How much encouragement did your mother give you? —T.N., Stockton, Calif.

● A lot. She was always musically inclined. As a boy, I dreamed of being a pro-football player. Mom, however, thought that was a career for barbarians. I can remember her waggling a finger at me and saying, "Do your practicing on the piano, not on the field." That doesn't mean she was a slave driver. I guess once she saw I could carry a tune, she felt I should get on with it and not waste time.



FOR MICHAEL DOUGLAS, actor and producer

What is your mother's most treasured possession? —Mary Moore, Washington, D.C.

● You won't believe this, but it's a photo of me sitting on the lap of Santa Claus in a department store, with tears streaming down my face. I have no idea why I was crying so bitterly — nor does Mom.

FOR BETTY ROLLIN, author of First, You Cry

● No. She was supportive, and all those unsaid things that go with it, but she didn't mollycoddle me. In fact, sometimes she went the other way. For instance, right after surgery I told Mom that I thought the whole experience had made me less polite than I was before the operation. Mom stared at me in surprise and said, "Polite! You were never polite, so how could you become less so?"

FOR LORNA LUFT, daughter of Judy Garland

Do you think talent is inherited? What did you get from your mother? —S.G.S., Poughkeepsie, N.Y.

● Mom didn't get her talent from anyone, but she was loaded with it. What I got from my mother was her sense of humor, which is a plus, and her temper, which is a minus. Liza [Minnelli] and I were both born with good voices, but we didn't know what to do with them. We either sang flat or sharp. Soon as Mom realized this, she sent us to a school. That's how Liza turned out to be the world's greatest entertainer.

FOR HUGHES RUDD, CBS News

Can you remember the first time your mother got angry with you? —B.B., Ogden, Utah

● I'll never forget it. At eight, I was melting lead in one of my mother's saucepans in order to cast lead soldiers. That saucepan wound up with a lead bottom — and I got an inflamed bottom.

FOR SEN. WARREN G. MAGNUSON (D-Wash.)

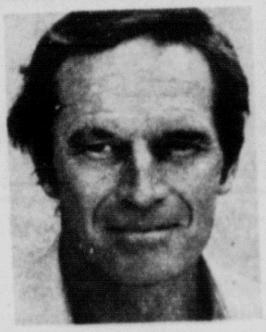
On behalf of all mothers, I'm wondering if the passage of the Federal Toy Safety Law has reduced toy-related injuries to children? —Mrs. L. Mills, Hobart, Ind.

● Yes, because enactment of the Toy Safety Law has been responsible for the removal of the most blatantly unsafe toys from the marketplace. However, we still have a way to go. The Consumer Product Safety Commission must promulgate general standards applicable to all toys.

FOR EDITH HEAD, designer

My daughter is getting married soon, and we're curious about the significance of the bridal veil. —Clare Johnson, Hackensack, N.J.

● It's the modern form of the flammeum, or large orange veil, that completely enveloped Greek and Roman brides during the wedding ceremony. According to François Boucher, who wrote 20,000 Years of Fashion, "The Roman bride placed an orange veil or flammeum on her head, hiding the upper part of her face, and a wreath of marjoram and verbena, later of myrtle and orange blossom."



FOR THE "ASK THEM YOURSELF" EDITOR

What's the cutest Mother's Day story you know? —T.M., Corpus Christi, Texas

● The one about Charlton Heston (right). When he was 14, he bought his mother a big box of chocolates several days before Mother's Day. Before he wrapped it, he opened the box to take another look at the pretty contents and was heartsick when he saw that most of the candies had melted. (Because he wanted them to be a surprise, he didn't refrigerate them, but kept the box in his warm room.) On the accompanying card he wrote: "Mom, you melt my heart, too."

FOR IRMA SHORELL, skin-care expert

Why do today's mothers look younger than their mothers and grandmothers? —H.S., Bradford, Pa.

● Moms these days are more concerned, more active and more involved. They're more aware of how they're put together, what makes them tick and what pulls them apart. Attitude, and the fact that they care how they look, are also important. Many of yesterday's mothers and grandmothers didn't care how they looked. Two generations ago, women had no time for themselves. They were too busy cooking, laundering and cleaning; they didn't have today's appliances and conveniences.

PRO AND CON

Should Men Receive Alimony?

PRO Doris Sassower, human rights attorney, past President, New York Women's Bar Association.

Yes. Alimony should not be stereotyped as a woman's right. Alimony creates a dependency. Women have been programmed for dependency, and they don't have to be. A couple's responsibilities must be shared or the rights will not be equal. I would revise alimony to "maintenance" payable by either spouse on a need basis and upon ability to pay — but with one restriction: the marital assets would have to be divided equally, unless one party can prove that equal distribution is unjust.

No. The role of guardian and breadwinner is still the man's in our society — regardless of the feminists' efforts to change this. If a man wants to let a woman support him, or if he is incapacitated, the woman is free to do that if she wishes. But the law should not place that duty upon wives. The current drive, whose object is to reduce protection for women, to wipe out every aspect of traditional sex roles, is a direct assault upon the meaning and structure of American family life as we know it today.

MY MOTHER— A VERY PERSONAL MEMOIR

"Even now, in her advancing years," says Jimmy, "she is still able to grow."

By Jimmy Carter

President of the United States

My mother Lillian is an extrovert, very dynamic and inquisitive in her attitude about life. Although her father seldom read a book, my mother has always been an avid reader, and so have I. Whenever anyone has asked me what I wanted for Christmas or my birthday, I have always replied, books.

Mother has always been a natural champion of those who are weak or the object of scorn or discrimination. She served as a doctor for our neighbors and for us and is extremely compassionate toward almost all those who are afflicted in any way.

Mother is a registered nurse, and during my formative years she worked constantly, primarily on private duty, either at the nearby hospital or in patients' homes. She typically worked on nursing duty 12 hours a day — sometimes 20 hours a day — for which she was paid a magnificent six dollars. During her off-duty hours she had to perform the normal functions of a mother and a housekeeper.

Quite often, my mother was not paid for her nursing services at all. At least not in cash. I remember that Mother once nursed a young girl for weeks who had diptheria. The girl's parents were very poor. Eventually she died, and a few weeks later the girl's father drove into our yard with a one-horse wagon loaded with turpentine chips. He had traveled more than a day to get there.

Although the wood chips had little monetary value, they were extremely helpful to us because they burst instantly into a roaring flame when touched with a match. Our house was heated by fireplaces in two double chimneys and the wood stove, and starting fires was a necessary chore every morning.

Life on our farm during the Great Depression more nearly resembled farm life in colonial days than farm life today, and the work was hard for everyone. People died and were disabled by diseases that now are almost unknown in this country.

For years we used an outdoor privy in the backyard and a hand pump for water. Later, another shallow well was dug under our back porch and a hand pump was installed. Eventually we had a windmill and running water in our home. In the bathroom there was a cold shower, a commode and a lavatory. It was not unusual during the winter to find the pipes frozen and the commode pushed off the wall and lying on the floor. Water for bathing had to be heated on the wood stove.

Some of the work on the farm was enjoyable, some was pure drudgery, but we could look back on the day's work and see what specifically had been accomplished. We worked hard, and my father was a stern disciplinarian, but he laughed a lot and almost everybody liked him. Daddy loved to have a good time and enjoyed parties much more than did mother.

At home in Plains, Ga.: Miss Lillian (78), Rosalynn (49), Jimmy (52) and Amy (9).

He also kept thorough records and was always scrupulously fair with those who dealt with him, and he was always probing for innovative business techniques and enterprises. He was very intelligent and kept up with current events, but he was quite conservative. My mother was, and is, a liberal, but within our family we never thought about trying to define such labels.

She taught us by her daily example to help the weak and handicapped even when it wasn't the comfortable or socially acceptable thing to do. She showed us that you can make your life count wherever you are and that you never outgrow a need for God's guidance.

As a nurse, my mother had skills and training that many of the people she worked with lacked, and sometimes she had to teach as well as treat patients. She likes to make things work better, but she is not rigid and remains willing to learn from others — including from the humblest person she is there to help. Even now, in her advancing years, she is still able to grow.

When my father died in 1953, Mother began to evolve a new life. All of the children were grown by then. For six years she was a fraternity housemother at Auburn University, and she opened and operated a nursing home in Blakely, Ga.

One night in 1966, when she was 68 years old, she saw a television advertisement for Peace Corps volunteers stating that "Age is no barrier." She sent for information and then announced to Billy and me that she was joining the Corps for service in Africa and India. We were not particularly surprised.

She went to the University of Chicago to learn the Indian dialect, Marathi, in order to teach nutrition. Mrs. Gandhi requested that some volunteers be assigned to an experimental program in family-planning, and Mother had to learn another language, Hindi.

While she was working at the little hospital in the village of Vikhroli, where the doctor was seeing 200 or 300 patients a day, she persuaded a factory-owner's wife to provide a clean room as a dispensary. She then induced major American drug companies to supply samples for the treatment of the most common ailments in India. She had things going her way.

Then a little girl with leprosy was brought in on her father's back and laid on a cot for injections. As Mother told it, "I had never touched leprosy. I never felt like I could. In the last stages one is completely eaten, but in the first stages you have black splotches all over, and sores. She was 11 years old and weighed only 32 pounds. I prayed 'Oh, God, I can't touch her.' I went back to the doctor's office and told him I didn't think I could do it — I was about to cry — and he said, 'Try, but if you can't, I'll come in and do it for you.'

"I made up my mind on the way from his office to mine that I would do it." She gave the little girl shots of streptomycin and vitamins. Afterwards, "I washed my hands and washed them and washed them, and all the time I was ashamed for washing them." She told me that she even put alcohol on them and went home and bathed and changed clothes.

But, "I knew that wouldn't do," she continued. "I had told the man to bring his daughter back every day. So the next day when she came, I just washed my hands. And I learned to love her. In the weeks of giving her injections she began to gain weight, and soon I could give her an injection and just casually wash my hands. But that took a lot of prayer."

When the little girl came back from the leprosarium six months later, she came running to Mother and brought her flowers and put her arms around Mother's neck and kissed her. "And you know," Mother said, "I didn't wash my face or hands."

Mother lost 30 pounds in India and for a long time after her return she couldn't eat any of the things she'd craved most because her less fortunate friends in India were on her mind. Although she was past 70, she began speaking to groups about her experiences in the Peace Corps and relating them to our needs for personal service in this country. A portion of her heart is still in India, but she lives a full and useful life wherever she is.

A NEW LOOK AT MYTHS ABOUT ADOLESCENTS

A recent study pinpoints how parents can misunderstand the nature of early adolescence in their children.

By Mary Long

Sometimes even the best-intentioned parent can't understand his child — at any age. But his confusion is likely to be the greatest when the child is between the ages of 11 and 15, says Joan Lipsitz, project director of the Southeastern Committee for Young Adolescents. Dr. Lipsitz recently headed a two-year Ford Foundation study that helps shed light on the problems of early adolescence. She found that parents (and society in general) still deal with these youngsters on the basis of several widespread — but badly mistaken — myths about what they're really like and what they really want and need from us. Some of the major misconceptions include:

• Myth: Adolescence is a period of tumultuous upheaval, and the best we can do is hold our breath, wait for it to pass and, meanwhile, segregate the children from the rest of society. Turmoil is not inevitable, however. Approximately 70 percent of these children go through this stage with relative serenity. Parents must try to learn how to distinguish between a distressed child, who really needs help, and one who is merely distressing them with less-than-perfect behavior.

There are signs that help tell you if a child is in emotional trouble. Pay particular attention to one who suddenly becomes quiet. We tend to be threatened by noisy, aggressive youngsters, not recognizing that a seriously depressed child is almost always a quiet child. Most adolescents who later commit suicide first show symptoms of emotional and social withdrawal. Watch also for poor performance in school, loss of appetite, sudden overeating and an inability or unwillingness to sleep regularly. Remember that experts say children do not "grow out" of these depressive symptoms — action must be taken.

Unfortunately, only 5 percent of our pediatricians have received training in adolescent medicine, and little literature is available for parents on this age group. Dr. Lipsitz suggests going to a school guidance counselor or to a social-service agency if you're seriously worried.

• Myth: The "adolescent uproar" occurs around the age of 14 or 15, which is when parents have to be especially strict. In reality, the wild, troublesome, "acting out" behavior tends to arrive earlier — even by the age of 11 or 12. When an 11-year-old starts acting up, parents get anxious, misunderstand and start "laying down the law" more than they should because they think they have to head off what they fear will be a bigger problem later. Actually, things will tend to calm down around the 10th grade. Parents should regard this pattern of behavior as normal and not compound the problem by creating more issues for rebellion.

• Myth: Young teenagers still are and should be treated as children. The onset of puberty has been occurring four months earlier every decade, and, at the very least, these kids, biologically, are no longer children. They may be maturing faster than their parents realize.

• Myth: Teenagers form a homogeneous group. They don't, and to describe a child simply as 13 years old — forgetting all the changes and growth that a 13-year-old goes through — says almost nothing about him. The variability of the several ages that adolescents must juggle — chronological, social, academic, biological, emotional, intellectual — is probably the most striking characteristic of this period and the least acknowledged by parents and society.

• Myth: Children are very tough at this age. Youngsters are particularly vulnerable at this stage and, believe it or not, very changeable. This means they also are receptive to positive decisions and influences. In fact, the most open-minded stage of their lives may be during this period when they are making their first real decisions. It's a great time to influence them for the good.

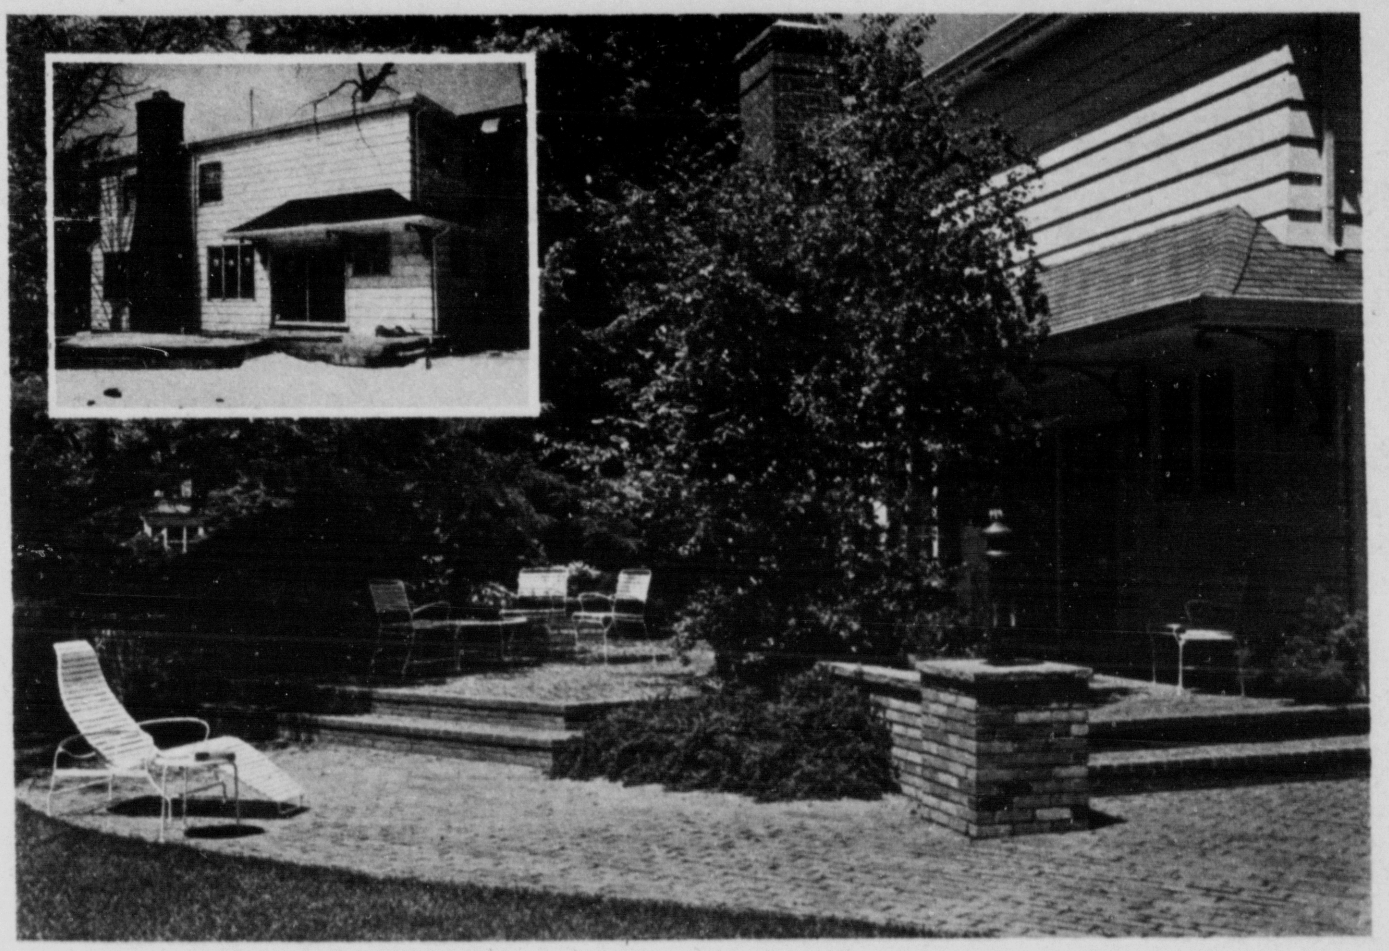
THE BEST WAYS TO MAKE YOUR HOME MORE LIVABLE, ATTRACTIVE AND SALABLE

Comfort and property maintenance are important. Follow our handy guide to make refurbishing easier and fun.

Putting off renovations is as natural as avoiding an umbrella and galoshes when weather predictions indicate you'll need them. To help you, then, we decided to put together a section that includes information on what basic remodeling jobs involve, tips on how to decide refurbishing priorities and insights into which home improvements do and do not add to a house's resale value—plus a look at new products, helpful booklets you can order and some good paneling ideas.

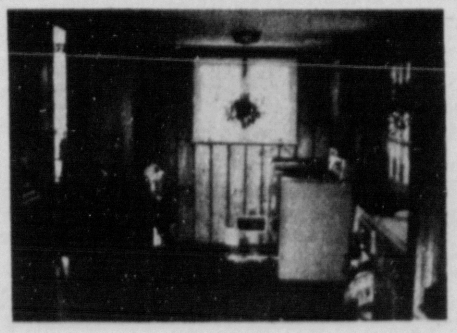


Add A Terrace

A gracious two-level brick terrace, in keeping with the brick chimney, extends living outdoors. The top level of the terrace is at floor level with the house, as two steps lead down to the free-form design. Shrubs add variety to the paving, while the flagstone-topped low walls separate areas and direct traffic. Young birch trees, beside the low wall, provide shelter from the hot afternoon sun. Landscaping by Arthur Klonsky & Assocs.

"Bowling Alley" Kitchen Transformed

This kitchen was a challenge, including the need for a picture window and storage cabinets that had to be "shaved" to clear the seven-foot ceiling. Interior designed by Janine J. Newlin.



Off-Beat Bedroom

A plain second-story bedroom was remodeled by decorator Louise Rosenfeld and her daughter. The ceiling of the 10′ x 16′ room is a giant collage, featuring radio parts, posters, sheet music, toys and other favorite miscellany. Bookshelves also have been built into the room, as well as a long counter for homework and hobbies,and with plenty of drawer space.

THE ABC'S OF REMODELING

Continued

Determining Whether To Renovate

A good idea might be to have each member of the family write down his needs in one column and, in another, note how adequately the house is meeting those needs. By comparing notes, a master list of priorities can be devised. Why, for instance, invest in enlarging the kitchen if no one really likes to cook? But if Mom and Dad hate sharing a bathroom with the kids, why not add another one?

Basic Remodeling Jobs

When redoing a kitchen you should plan to have the range, sink and refrigerator placed in a triangle with, where possible, four to six feet between each. Cooking and cleanup will be easier if there is continuous counter space within the work area. It's best to have the range close to the dining area, while the refrigerator should be near the door that you enter with the groceries. The most efficient kitchen is one where traffic in and out of the house does not go through the work triangle.

Putting in an extra bathroom is worth its cost in reduced family conflict. What's more, it needn't be a complete bathroom. You may choose to add a half-bath—with only a toilet and sink, or a shower stall—which might find its place carved out of part of a bedroom or hall. To cut down on costs, locate the new addition next to the other plumbing lines. (If possible, the new fixtures should be back-to-back with fixtures on the other side of the wall or over or under another bathroom, the kitchen sink or laundry facilities.) If you put in a recessed ventilating fan that turns on automatically with the light, the new bathroom can do without a window. Installing plumbing is best left to a professional—when the work is done, it must satisfy local building regulations. (Most remodeling jobs that involve extensions of your home where an outside wall is affected require a building permit.)

If you're living in a house whose roof needs repair, don't delay the task. Several kinds of materials are available for resurfacing. The price of the once widely used asphalt shingles has escalated, but roofers agree they are still the best value. Cedar shakes also have gone up in price but are again popular. They have the desirable self-insulating properties of all wood products and are attractive. You also might consider one of the new premium grades of asphalt shingles that resemble wood.

The question of whether you should add insulation no longer applies. With today's soaring heating and cooling bills, the only question is what kind of material to use.

Fiberglass is the most widely used form of sheet insulation and costs 10 to 13 cents a square foot. Urea-formaldehyde foam is gaining in usage and is said to be nonflammable. It should be installed by a licensed applicator, however, since, improperly mixed, it can develop a lingering formaldehyde odor.

Besides ceilings and walls, windows are prime sources of energy loss. You should investigate the best types for adequate insulation. Features to look for include double-paned insulating glass and factory-applied weatherstripping.

Renovations That Add To Resale Value

If you add a fourth bedroom, you can expect a dollar-for-dollar recovery of your costs. But don't expect the same return on a fifth or sixth bedroom. An addition of a second or third bathroom will recoup a 100-percent return, but the return drops sharply with a fourth bathroom. A modern, well-equipped kitchen is a prime sales motivator. If you remodel your kitchen, try to enlarge it as well. Finished basements will help quicken a sale, but you may not recover full cost. Generally, personal or specialized improvements bring poor returns on your investment. A lawn investment of up to $1,500—and another $1,500 in shrubs and trees—probably can be recovered if you sell.

Every year it gets harder to afford a home of your own. Because building costs have gone up faster than many people's ability to pay them. But don't quit looking until you've seen the new kind of housing that's already providing two-thirds of the new single-family homes under $30,000.

Over a million proud owners of manufactured homes can tell you why. They've learned that houses built in a factory—with assembly-line efficiencies—can be built for a lot less. Tough new U.S. Government building codes assure the craftsmanship inside manufactured homes.

And today you don't have to sacrifice good looks to find a home you can afford. Thanks to Masonite brand hardboard siding. At Masonite Corporation, we don't manufacture houses. But we make the siding that makes them look like home. And the lasting beauty of that siding helps make a manufactured home a good investment for you.

Take a look at the houses that are making an American dream affordable again. Manufactured homes—with Masonite brand hardboard siding.

YOUR GUIDE TO NEW REMODELING PRODUCTS

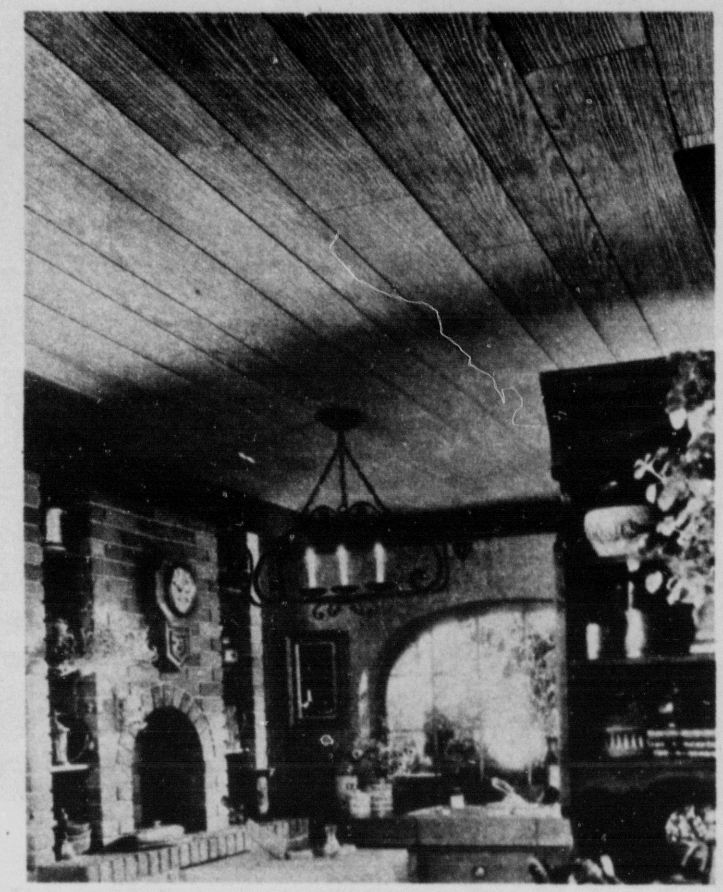
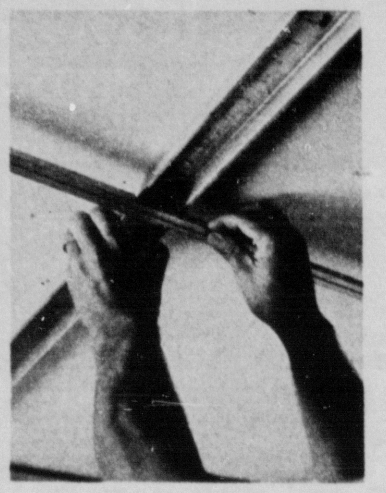
Tile It Yourself

A convenient new way to apply tile for a kitchen backsplash or tub surround is with Redi-Set sheets, which have been factory-grouted with silicone rubber. This grout, more flexible than cement grout, will not crack and is stain-and-mildew resistant. The tile sheets may be installed over any clean, sound surface, including existing ceramic tile. Available through American Olean sales service centers.





Rustic-Look Ceiling

Emphasizing the "natural" trend in décor is this ceiling that reproduces the woodlike texture of random-width planks. It's a design from Armstrong to be installed by you through a metal Integrid system, which permits the ceiling to be applied either directly to an existing ceiling, over open joists or suspended across the room from any height.

Energy-Saving Glass

An add-on panel of Solarcool, a bronze-tinted reflective glass, reduces glare and air-conditioning costs and increases privacy by day with its mirrored façade. May be installed in storm–window frames or, for permanent installation, may be glazed into a wood or aluminum window frame — recommended for southern climates. This reflective glass, from PPG, is also available in new replacement windows.

Three-In-One Fixture

What's better than a simple bathroom light? One that combines two other elements, like instant heat and quiet ventilation. It has three separate on/off controls and the different functions can operate individually, all together or in any combination of the two. The fixture is easily removable for cleaning. Manufactured by the NuTone Division of Scovill.

ORTHENE®

When it comes to protecting roses, flowers, shrubs, trees and ornamentals against insects, you can't do better than new ORTHENE. It wipes out over 100 different destructive insect species quickly and efficiently both on contact and with a local systemic action. And it's biodegradable, too. New ORTHENE Insect Spray, now available at your ORTHO® dealer.

Chevron ORTHO Chevron Chemical Company

Popular Roof Design

The finished elegance of shingles is achieved here with Certain-Teed's wood look-alike heavyweight asphalt shingles. The weightier roofing has a life expectancy of 25 years or more. Standard-weight shingles are reputed to last about 10 to 15 years. Tip: Since roofers measure your roof in squares, payment is figured by the square for materials and labor.

BOOKLETS TO ORDER

Brick Outdoor Projects

This comprehensive color booklet gives detailed drawings and instructions for building 16 outdoor projects ranging from a patio to a sandbox. It also describes how to estimate the amount of material you'll need, to select tools for the job and to prepare the site. 50¢. Write: Brick Institute of America, Dept. FW., 1750 Old Meadow Rd., McClean, Va. 22101.
Virginia residents add 4 percent sales tax. No stamps please.

Garden Projects

Here's a booklet that gives you instructions on how to build planters, decorative screens, flower-bed edging, steps and walks—all of concrete and mortar mixes. Eighteen projects. Free. Write: Sakrete Inc., Dept. FW., Fisher Ave. & B&O Railroad, P.O. Box 17087, Cincinnati, Ohio 45217.

Improve Your Roofing I.Q.

A booklet that helps you evaluate the condition of your roof by telling you the warning signs of trouble, it also describes the pros and cons of today's roofing materials. 10¢. Write: Johns-Manville Sales Corp., Attn: C. L. Hoffman, Dept. FW., Ken-Caryl Ranch, Denver, Colo. 80217.

Bathroom Planning Ideas

A new 32-page bathroom decorating guide features a variety of bathroom styles along with suggestions for different color schemes. It's complete with floor plans and a directory listing all the manufacturers of the products—from towels to wallpaper—featured in the bathroom settings. $1.50. Send check to Eljer Plumbingware, Dept. GREAT PANELING IDEAS DON'T COST A FORTUNE

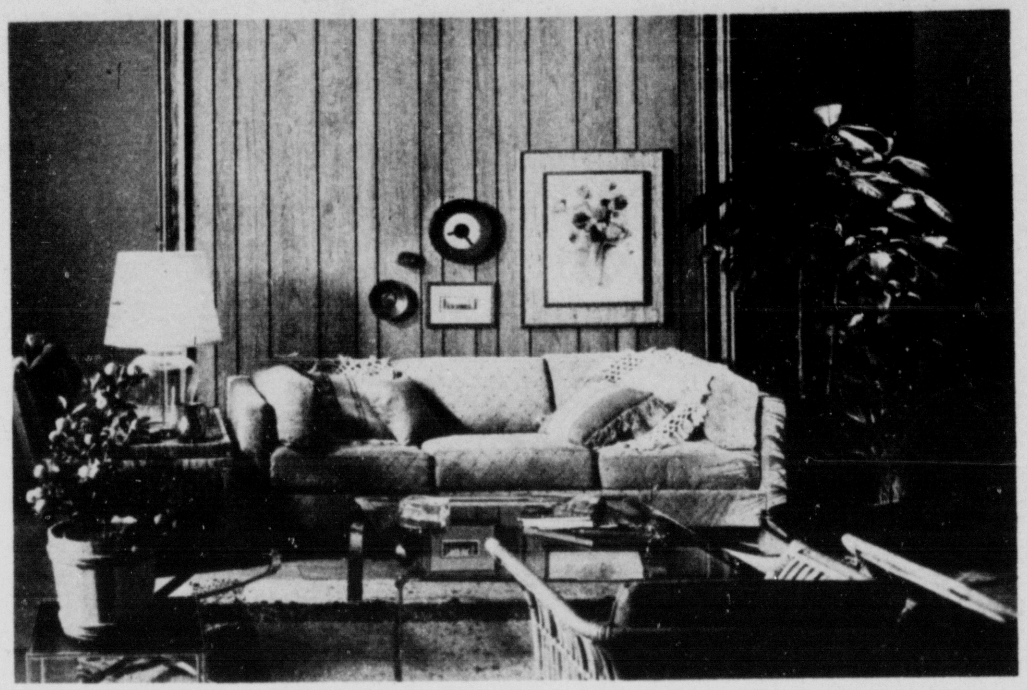
If you want to add the warmth and look of wood to your home, think of paneling in small doses.



Frame A Wall

You don't need to place paneling across the entire wall to get a decorator look. Two panels of Georgia-Pacific's Es-Sprit Champagne are surrounded by wood molding. The cost is approximately $10 for each panel.

Define An Area

Paneling can locate the conversation area of a family room or basement. Installed horizontally, it gives the illusion of wider space. The panels, of Weldwood Vinylgard, are in a wood-grain print. They cost about $10 each. By Champion Building Products.

The window that helps save fuel, saves maintenance, too, Andersen® Perma-Shield.®

Unlike the leaky, drafty kind, Andersen Perma-Shield® windows and gliding doors are built to save heating and cooling costs. In fact, over the life of your mortgage, their net monthly savings can help reduce the cost of owning a new or remodeled home.

Energy-saving glass. Optional double-pane insulating glass or triple glazing helps reduce winter heat loss through the glass. Helps make the most of a well-insulated house.

Snug-fitting design. Two times more weathertight than recognized air-infiltration standards. To help seal out dust and drafts.

No storm window bother. Andersen's use of wood and optional double-pane insulating glass in a snug-fitting design provides the major part of the fuel savings benefits of single-pane glass with storm windows. And only half the cleaning chores.

Long life, low maintenance. The rigid vinyl sheath over the wood core is designed not to chip, flake, blister or peel. Not to rust, pit or corrode. (Sash exterior of the double-hung window has a long-lasting polyurea finish.)

Dress Up A Stairway

The delicate charm and grandeur of French Provincial styling are handsomely reproduced in Masonite's Provence paneling, with deep detailed insets, that give a hand-carved look. The durable hardboard paneling, in soft colors, wipes clean with a damp cloth. Each 4' x 8' panel costs less than $15.

ANSWERS TO THE MOST-ASKED QUESTIONS ABOUT REMODELING

No more guessing about guarantees, contractor costs or which projects to tackle first. Here are detailed facts.

Q. What sequence should I follow when I remodel my home?
A. This depends upon your needs and your budget and how extensively you choose to remodel. Insulation should always be your first consideration, even though it is a remodeling factor that is not visible. If you undertake more than one remodeling project, start first with items that are behind the walls: electric wiring, plumbing lines and the like. Next, make your structural changes, such as adding or removing windows, doors or stairways. Finish ceilings and walls before tackling floors to avert damage caused by dripping paint or falling plaster. Finally, install electrical outlets for free-standing lamps, then finish by carpeting or laying new floors.

Q. What are the most common remodeling mistakes?
A. The do-it-yourselfer tends to underestimate the difficulty of his project and the cost, time and hazard often involved. If you don't know how to work with electrical wiring, for example, don't experiment in your own home at the risk of electrocution or causing a fire. Working on roofs can be extremely hazardous, too, and every year fatal falls occur among do-it-yourselfers who failed to consider the dangers involved. When improving a lawn or landscape, home owners often work without a blueprint, frequently don't buy good-quality plants or shrubs and fail to fertilize or water according to instructions. When hiring a remodeling contractor, they generally shop around only for price, settling on the lowest bidder. They fail to ask whether the contractor has insurance to cover 1) workmen's compensation (for injury to his workers), 2) property damage (to your house while work is underway) and 3) liability insurance (to cover occupants of your house or neighbors). A good contractor pays a lot for insurance protection. Example: Workmen's compensation can amount to 17 percent of his labor costs when doing a roof, 7 percent when doing siding or carpentry. But it's a good investment. If a workman accidentally injures a neighbor's child who has wandered over to watch the work, you could lose your home if the contractor is not insured. Home owners also commonly fail to ask: Who cleans up after the job is done? Who pays extra costs (such as for a building permit, if required)? What are the start and finish dates?

Q. How can I check on the competence of a contractor?
A. Find out whether he has a place of business—an office, warehouse or showroom. The absence of all three suggests he works out of his glove compartment or basement. Ask for the names of satisfied customers, then go and see them and the work that was done. Ask how many years the contractor has been doing business under the same name. Find out if he uses brand-name products or merchandise in his work. Ask for the name of his bank and suppliers, then check his credit-rating. Call the Better Business Bureau and see whether there are any unresolved complaints against him. Find out if the contractor is a broker (who will subcontract the job to others). A broker will probably charge more, factoring in a commission for himself, and be less accessible in the event of problems. You also can call the National Remodelers Association to see whether a contractor is a member bound by its code of ethics or whether he has a record of complaints.

Q. What guarantees can I expect?
A. A roof should be guaranteed for 15 to 35 years, aluminum siding for 20 to 40 years, and insulation should be guaranteed against settling for the life of the house. Carpentry and alterations should be guaranteed unconditionally for one year. Appliances should come with a manufacturer's warranty.

Q. How can I estimate typical costs?
A. They will vary according to the section of the country, the quality of materials used, the reliability of the contractor and other factors. Here are some rules-of-thumb:

A) Remodeling an existing 5′ x 7′ bath, with the installation of three new fixtures and average ceramic tile (4′ high), should cost about $3,000. (You may reduce the cost by $300 to $500 if you remove fixtures yourself and do cleanup.)

B) Remodeling an average kitchen (10′ x 12′), with new cabinets of good grade installed, removal and disposal of old cabinets, minimal plumbing and electrical work, should cost between $2,000 and $3,000. (If you remove and dispose of old cabinets and do cleanup yourself, you can save $300 to $400.)

C) Converting a basement into a 24′ x 20′ recreation room, with finished ceiling, floor and paneling, insulation, no heavy plumbing, minimal lighting, minimal heating and standard number of electrical outlets, should cost between $4,000 and $5,000. (If you do much of the work yourself, such as installing ceiling tile, insulation and paneling, you may be able to cut cost down to about half.)

Observations™

"Shocking business, eh, losing the Colonies." That's the greeting Ross Poldark gets, returning to his native Cornwall, England, after the American Revolution. But there's more "shocking business" ahead for Ross on Poldark, the 16-part series that begins tonight on Mobil's "Masterpiece Theatre." Ross comes back from a lost war only to find that he must fight for a new life. His family believed him dead. The estate he should have inherited from his father is in disarray. His fiancee is now engaged to his cousin. And he has become a rebel against his class, a supporter of the weak and the poor. This colorful dramatic series, full of romance and adventure, is being shown on the Public Broadcasting Service. Check your local TV listing for the time and station.

Farewell, Rose. Goodbye, Mr. Bellamy. It has been good knowing you, Hudson. In the words of Nora Ephron, writing in Esquire, "we all wish Upstairs, Downstairs would last forever." But the last episode has now been broadcast, and America must adjust to Sunday evenings without the Bellamys. We at Mobil have enjoyed our association with the series these past four years, and we're proud of the critical acclaim (and six Emmys) it has won. So it's with a tear in our eye that we bid farewell to Upstairs, Downstairs.

"ISN'T HE CUTE? I GOT THE IDEA FROM 'UPSTAIRS, DOWNSTAIRS.'"

Better late than never. How well does TV keep you informed? That's a question media critic Edith Efron, author of The News Twisters, tries to answer. In a recent essay, she finds that television is "weirdly out of date" when it comes to reporting the causes of the nation's energy problems. As an example, she cites the fact that it took TV reporters 23 years to get around to broadcasting the "news" that, by setting price controls on interstate sales of natural gas, the government would inevitably trigger shortages.

"Ideological blinders," she says, kept reporters from an accurate explanation. "For the network liberals," she writes, "even the most scholarly exposes of government regulation were simply 'reactionary' noise—pro-profits, thus self-evidently untrue." She's glad for the "breakthrough," when government's role in creating the shortage was finally reported, but she adds: "...it must be said that the network news departments have done a gross disservice to this country."

DO MEN AND WOMEN EXPECT THE SAME THINGS FROM MARRIAGE?

Here is a test you and your spouse can take...the answers may surprise both of you.

By Mary Susan Miller

On their 15th wedding anniversary Nancy exploded at her husband Mack, "Do you know what I really want you to give me?" She hurled the hiking boots he had bought her across the floor and yelled, "A divorce!" Her husband was stunned. He had thought their marriage was great.

Eight months, one marriage counselor and a thousand dollars later, they had begun to see what was wrong. Mack had spent 15 years turning Nancy into his best friend, the buddy he hadn't had since his war days. Nancy had spent those same 15 years longing for her husband to love and baby her as her father had done years earlier.

Aware of human inability to understand and articulate needs, Dr. Clifford Adams of Pennsylvania State University devised a test for married couples. He listed six ingredients of marriage in random order: Home and Family, Encouraging Helpmate, Security, Companionship, Sex, Love and Affection. Six thousand couples ranked them individually in order of importance. They then ranked them in the order they thought their spouse considered them important.

Results were startling. While women chose Love and Affection as the number-one ingredient of marriage, men chose Companionship. Yet husbands and wives tested totally failed in assessing the ingredients they thought their spouses would list as a top priority. Wives listed Sex for their husbands; husbands listed Home and Family for their wives. Actually, the evaluation by each was as follows:

MEN	WOMEN
Companionship	1 Love and Affection
Sex	2 Security
Love and Affection	3 Companionship
Home and Family	4 Home and Family
Encouraging Helpmate	5 Encouraging Helpmate
Security	6 Sex

The results support the contention of Dr. Selma Miller, President of the Association of Marriage and Family Counselors: "The most common cause of marriage problems is that partners' needs are in conflict, but they can't discuss the conflict because they don't know one exists. They only know they are miserable."

Sex, the test shows, creates the most acute conflict, with women ranking it last and men second from the top. However, the subtle shades of difference between Companionship and Love and Affection—husbands' and wives' top priority respectively—may cause more chronic woe.

Dr. Adams's test is presented below for husbands and wives to take. The test alone, however, doesn't take you anywhere. What you do with it is what counts. Couples should take the test separately, share the results and then, using them as a handle, become their own marriage counselors. In addition:

1. Do not begin the discussion with a question—"Why is companionship important to you? or "What don't you like about sex?" A question poses a threat. An answer entails putting yourself on the line, which many people are not confident enough to do.

2. Do open with what are called "I" statements—"I would like to be a better companion to you" or "I feel I can make sex a more fulfilling part of our relationship." Such statements breed intimacy and honest effort—especially when followed by "Please help me."

3. Really listen. Then you will hear.

4. Don't place blame on either partner. This sets up enemy camps. A relationship must have husband and wife on the same side.

5. Make this the start of an ongoing program. One shot is no good. Set aside a weekly time slot for your marriage. If you structure it, as you do your workday, your morning newspaper and your dinner hour, you are telling your partner, "I care about our relationship. I want to make it better."

Rate the following ingredients of marriage in order of importance, 1 being the highest, 6 the lowest.

WHAT ROOT-CANAL WORK REALLY MEANS

Using this method, thousands of teeth are being saved that once would have been extracted. By Irwin J. Polk, M.D.

Richard C. Burns D.D.S. / San Mateo, CA

There was a time when dentists yanked bad teeth as fast as they could find them. Even if the complaint was a simple toothache, the treatment often was extraction. Why? Because dentists then believed that painful teeth were either dead or infected, and in either case they should be removed. Today, though, with any dentist worth his floss, it's not that way.

Teeth are not just shiny, bony things stuck in the gums. They are actually complex organs. The part we see above the gums—the crown—is just the tip of the iceberg, so to speak. Each crown continues below the gums, dividing into roots. The crown and the roots have a hollow center called the pulp cavity. That cavity contains dental pulp—the live and growing part of the tooth that is richly supplied with blood vessels and nerves. When the pulp is in jeopardy, the nerves let you know. Your tooth aches when you eat something hot or cold, sweet or sour. It aches when you chew. It even may ache when it's not being used for anything more than a smile—and that's when you know you have trouble within the pulp cavity with infected or even dead pulp. That's the toothache that sends you scurrying to the phone to call your dentist.

The first thing the dentist will do is X-ray the tooth so that he can see the pulp cavity and locate the infection. If root-canal work seems to be needed, he'll refer you to an endodontist, a specialist who will drill through the crown to get to the offending pulp by working in the tubes in the roots which carry the pulp and are called "root canals." Maneuvering in a tiny tunnel with instruments no thicker than a hair, he cleans and enlarges the root canals, carefully removing the pulp and, with it, the source of the infection. Once this is done, the tooth will have a chance to heal. Finally, he tightly packs the root canals, seals them and fills the hole in the crown. After this complete treatment, the tooth will be almost as good as new.

Of course, with nerves gone, you can't feel hot or cold on the tooth, but you can chew again, and that awful pain is gone with the pulp. In fact, since the root-canal treatment is done while the patient is under a pain-killing injection, you don't feel the treatment, either. What you do feel is happiness that modern dentistry has developed this very sophisticated oral service.

ARMOUR'S ARMOURY

HOW ABOUT CHOPSTICKS?

A knife, a fork, a spoon
I use without advice.
One cuts, one holds, one scoops —
The trio should suffice.

And there's the soup spoon, too.
And often other kinds
Of forks and spoons, it's true.

Which first, and which for what?
I'm often in a plight.
I wait and watch my neighbor
And hope that she is right.

—Richard Armour

An elderly lady was bragging about her son. "He's a surgeon," she announced proudly. "That's fine," answered her patient listener. "And he's performed over three hundred operations," the proud mom continued, "and he hasn't cut himself even once." —Dorothea Kent

Horsepower's not my concern . . .
For I've found that a speedier drive'll
Just shorten the time till I learn there's nowhere to park on arrival.

WHAT IN THE WORLD...

Easy-To-Do Energy-Saving Tips

In case you've forgotten all those energy-saving tips that were offered during the energy shortage not long ago (thinking that the shortage would go away), here's an opportunity to refresh your memory. Most of these suggestions require no additional effort on the cook's part—just a little advance thought.

- Prepare double recipes of soups, stews, etc. Then freeze half.
- Whenever possible, thaw food before cooking it.
- Cover saucepans whenever possible. Foods cook faster; water boils more quickly. Be sure pots have tight lids.
- Foods cooked in shallow baking dishes and in covered casseroles cook more quickly.
- Cut-up foods cook more quickly.
- The oven does not need preheating for casseroles, stewed meats, etc. When preheating an electric oven for baked goods, place food in as soon as automatic light goes off. In gas stoves, do not preheat oven more than 10 minutes. Do not preheat broiler unless recipe specifies to do so.
- Avoid oven-peeping. Each time you open the oven door, you lose 20 percent of the heat.

Advice On Women's Credit

Now that it's illegal to deny women credit because of their sex, they need more information about their new status. Here are answers to three frequently asked questions:

Q. Is a woman liable for her husband's debts?

A. If your husband dies or deserts the family, you are liable for debts you took on jointly with him—a cosigned mortgage or personal loan, for example. You are not liable for debts he contracted individually. If your husband's bad credit history damages your chances of getting credit, you should be prepared to present the creditor with reasons why that should not reflect on your willingness or ability to repay a loan.

Q. Does a woman have to reapply for credit when she marries?

A. Federal law forbids lenders from making you reapply for credit—or imposing new conditions on it—when you get married, are separated, divorced or widowed.

Q. Does a working wife's income carry as much weight as the husband's when a couple applies for a mortgage loan?

A. Yes. A creditor must consider, without prejudice, the combined income of both husband and wife. This means that your income—from a full-time or permanent part-time job—can't be discounted because you're a woman.

How To Know If Your Child Has A Hearing Problem

You can detect hearing problems in your child long before he enters school, says Dr. Maurice Miller, chief audiologist for New York University and Lenox Hill Hospital. He lists the following signs of normal hearing development for a child:

- A one-month-old should blink or be startled by a loud noise.
- A three-month-old should respond to his parents' voices and know from where a sound is coming.
- Throughout the second year, he should show signs of understanding language.

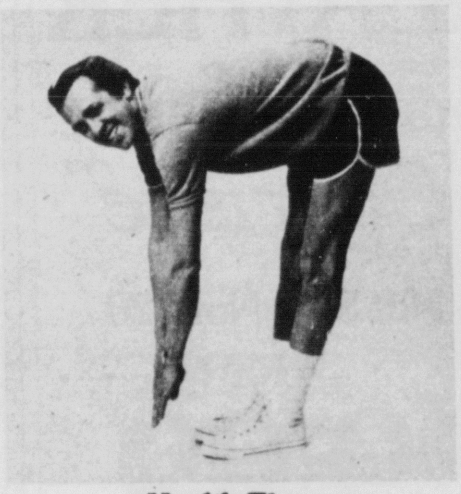
Dr. Miller says one indication of hearing loss is when the baby is surprised at seeing a parent because the child heard no footsteps. Dr. Steve Rosenbaum, head of the hearing center at the Long Island, N.Y., Jewish Hillside Medical Center, suggests parents stay out of a baby's vision, make baby-talk sounds toward one side of the youngster's head and see whether the child turns toward the sound. A failure for a baby six-months old to respond should be cause for concern.

Fighting Con Men With Comic Books

A consumer law-training group is using comic books to fight con men. The eight-page The Door to Door Career Con illustrates the high-pressure tactics used by some vocational schools to attract students by promising new careers and financial security that don't materialize. The publisher is the Consumer Law Training Center of the New York Law School, operating under a grant from the U.S. Office of Education. The book is available at bulk rates to organizations, or to individuals for 25¢, by writing: Consumer Law Training Center, New York Law School, 57 Worth Street, New York, N.Y. 10013.

Dropping Courses Will Be Costly To GI Bill Users

Veterans going to school under the GI Bill have a new incentive to complete their course work. If they don't, Uncle Sam will demand full refunds from them. In the past, if a veteran dropped courses and ended up carrying too few hours to qualify for his payments, the Veterans Administration (VA) paid for the courses up until the date he dropped them. But under new legislation, the VA is seeking retroactive refunds from any student who drops courses and takes fewer classroom hours than required for his VA payment. The VA urges veterans to confer with the veterans-affairs office of their school to see what effect dropping courses will have on them.



Health Tips For Weekend Athletes

"Weekend athletes are more prone to injury than people who play in organized sports," says Steve Gundersen, head athletic trainer at Georgetown University. For this reason, they should take special precautions against getting hurt. Here are Gundersen's health tips for the weekend athlete:

1. Select proper equipment and make sure it fits. For example, a jogger needs shoe padding and arch supports to absorb foot shock.

2. Inspect athletic facilities for safety. For instance, remove all hazardous objects, such as glass, from the playing field.

3. Exercise during the week and just before your activity. "Some stretching exercises are recommended before you go to bed or when you wake up," Gundersen says. "Slow stretching will enable a muscle to lengthen and prepare it for the event it's going to be asked to do."

Quick Takes

The number of college degrees awarded to women has almost doubled—from 664,000 in 1965 to 1,305,000 in 1975, according to the National Center for Educational Statistics. . . . When it comes to keeping the feet and legs in shape, the next-best thing to walking is using a rocking chair, says Dr. Arthur Helfand, cochief of podiatry at St. Luke's and Children's Medical Center in Philadelphia. "The action of the foot, flexing and extending, stimulates the muscles of the lower leg," he says. "It can also considerably improve blood circulation throughout both the legs and feet." . . . A recent study of children with imaginary playmates found that 55 percent of them had the playmate for less than a year, 27 percent for a year, and 18 percent had the companion for more than two years. Dr. Violet Kalyan-Mashih, associate professor of human development and the family at the University of Nebraska, reported that she found no difference in intelligence and creativity between children who had imaginary playmates and those who did not. An earlier study had shown there was no link between having an imaginary playmate and behavior problems. . . . The Census Bureau reports that six states have experienced increases of more than 30 percent in their elderly population since 1970. The states are: Nevada, 52 percent; Arizona, 46 percent; Florida, 40 percent; Hawaii, 36 percent; New Mexico, 34 percent; Alaska, 32 percent.
